MENAGERY OF MUSIC

OVER-SUBSIDISED ART'S POVERTY

PARADOX IN PARIS

Paris. Intrigued by the fact that Paris provides a city the size of Boston with half a dozen symphony orchestras, that it probably offers more first performances than any other city in the world, and that in spite of this apparent violent musical interest, it plays the music it presents, with consistent badness, an investigation of this paradoxical position is being sought.

The reason seems to be too much encouragement.

France is the prototype of paternal government, and there are few human pursuits that can be described as "worthy" which are not in some way directly encouraged by the government by the simple method of handing some money to somebody. It appears that symphonic music is no exception. In this case the subsidy is handed out in proportion to the number of first performances of French works that appear on the year's programmes.

It might appear at first blush that this is a splendid thing, but as it works out it gives reason to the opinion that the good old doctrine of private initiative and laissez faire has perhaps one or two good points.

QUALITY UNIMPORTANT

The first result is that orchestras are founded and thereafter operated by persons whose interests are financial rather than musical. Quality of performance does not affect the government subsidy. Granting that orchestras in other countries are directed by businessmen rather than philanthropists, which is far from being the general rule, their own interests impel them to give reasonably good performances to hold audiences and to support the box-office. This necessity does not appear in France, and the cheaper the overhead, the higher the profit.

The government does not even get good measure for its money, for second (unsubsidized) performances of new works are almost unheard of, competition is strong for excerpts from new works which require no more than three minutes playing time, and in a whole season the new music presented, if played at all, would not detain its audience much longer than its accustomed period.

The sad fact that in most Paris papers the critic's appreciation of a composition is in direct proportion to the impresario's friendliness with the advertising department of his paper, if not to the amount of interest shown in an easily calculable mathematical fashion in the critic himself, does not prevent composers from wishing wistfully that just once some one critic might be able to sit through his work from beginning to its not far distant end, mangled as it might be by the low-priced musicians recruited from the neighbourhood cafes for the rendition of symphonies.

UNFORTUNATE COMPOSER

To just how great an extent government benevolence makes it easier for the young French composer to get his work played may be judged from the recent case of Hector Fraggi, by no means an unknown composer. (His opera "A quoi revient les jeunes filles" has been presented in Marseilles), who has exceptional relations with the persons who decide what music is to be played. Nevertheless this was his experience with a ballet

BANANA AND DATE SALAD

PEEL and thinly slice 6 bananas, place them in a shallow dish, and squeeze over them the juice of 1/2 a lemon. Stone 1/2 lb. good dates, cut each in four, and place with the bananas. Mix three tablespoonfuls olive oil with a tablespoonful lemon juice and season with salt and pepper. Pour the dressing over the fruit and garnish with the heart and crispier leaves of a fresh lettuce.

"Conte d'Asie," based on an episode from the Arabian Nights.

Several years ago Fraggi's ballet was accepted by the Opera-Comique and announced for presentation during the season. Three directors succeeded one another, but the ballet did not appear. The directors were willing, but the complicated politics of the subsidized theatre continually got in the way. Despairing of ever hearing his music played in a house kept running by the French government's paternal interest in the art of music, Fraggi managed to get one of Paris's major orchestras, the Lamoureux, to put a minute fragment from it on its programme.

Naturally, the first performances of Pierre Bretagne's "Priere du soldat dans la montagne," of "A ceux qui viennent" by Jeanne Depay, and of the finale (only) of a symphony of Paul Le Flem were to be heard elsewhere at the same time, but Fraggi hoped for some of the critics.

CRUEL CRITIC

Then the Gaite-Lyrique, putting on Reynaldo Hahn's operetta "Malvina," suddenly shifted the date of its first performance and made it coincide with the orchestra concerts, which took the critics away from all the first auditions.

One reviewer—Emile Vuillermont of "Excelsior"—was alone in hearing Fraggi's composition. He reported that it was miserably played, and that without explanation the last section, listed on the programme, was omitted, the orchestra having had time that very morning only to run through once the earlier part of the composition, because it devoted most of its time to the preparation of that unknown work, Beethoven's "Heroic Symphony."

That was the result of Fraggi's years of effort to get his piece before the public, and now that the subsidy has been collected for its presentation, it is unlikely that it will be played again.—United Press.

YOUNG NAZIS TRAINED

SCHOOL RECESS ON FARMS

NO AIMLESS PLAN

Berlin.

Summer school holidays this year will mean something more than aimless play for some 30,000 Prussian school boys and girls between 10 and 14 years of age. That number, it is estimated, will be taken to the country this summer in the second year of the Nazi "Landjahr" organisation for the agricultural training of the children.

Organised into brigades, mostly from industrial and tenement sections of the cities, the children are placed in camps of 40 to 50, or are housed in hamlets adjoining the land where they are to work and learn. Although they are from the less favoured sections of the cities, there are no weaklings among them, for they have been subjected to thorough physical tests, and have received the recommendation of their teachers.

The Nazi state is not a charitable institution, they must be fit, one official of the Ministry of Culture said in outlining the "Landjahr" work. "Membership in the Landjahr is a certain distinction for a school child; he finds it easier to get an apprenticeship. Artisans prefer a boy who has gone through the year, and many of last year's group have already obtained good jobs." Participation in the "Landjahr" is not compulsory in applying for an apprenticeship, however, it was stated.

IDEALOGY LECTURES

The "Landjahr" is not an automatic apprenticeship to farm labour, it is explained; that is a department organised from the older Hitler Youth, and is called the "Land Hilf- Dienst" (Land Helpers Service). The "Landjahr" really asks and expects little actual farm labour on which the peasants can depend in working their land; it is rather intended as a course in nature instruction for city children.

The boys and girls are housed in separate camps or homes, under a leader who has completed a special course of Nazi instruction. In the forenoon they are taken in groups to the land and set to small tasks, such as weeding, clearing brush, or helping with the milking. Perhaps their most useful time is during harvest, when they relieve the regular workers of many small chores.

The groups return to their homes for the noon meal, and then are put to bed for a two-hour nap. In the afternoon they forget about farm work. Games and sports fill in the time until dusk, when they hike back for the evening meal and then listen to a lecture on Nazi ideology.

COVETED TASK

Because the actual work is light and the comradeship element is strong, the "Landjahr" has become a coveted assignment among city school children. Many who completed the session last summer having completed their grade school and failed to get an apprenticeship in the city, have returned to the villages and through contacts established in the summer have got jobs with neighbouring peasants or with artisans in the hamlets. That is one of the chief aims of the "Landjahr"—to instill a love of the land in the children and induce as many as possible to go to the country, although it is emphasized that there is no coercion toward this end.

To date the "Landjahr" has been confined to Prussia only. Last year 22,000 schoolchildren, 14,000 boys and 8,000 girls participated. The estimated 31,000 for this summer from Prussia is smaller than had been hoped, due to the lack of enough trained leaders. It may be another year before the service can be extended to the rest of Germany.—United Press.

"FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY" RETURNS TO P.I.

MANUEL QUEZON'S POLICY IS "AMERICA FIRST"

Manuel L. Quezon, whom the Philippines may honour with election as first president, in a portrait just completed by Leon Gordon, noted painter.

A bronze little man with graying hair is back in native Philippine Islands to face what very likely will be a glorious climax to a life of public service.

He is Manuel L. Quezon, for years the president of the Philippines Senate and guiding spirit of his people. Unless all signs fail, he will be the first president of the Philippines commonwealth, which is established under the recently enacted Philippine Independence bill.

So potent an influence in the life of his people has he become that rival political parties are expected to bury their prejudices to pay him the signal honour of making him the unopposed candidate for the presidency in the election to be held in September 16—an accolade comparable to George

Washington's "Father of His Country" title, though Quezon has won independence for the islands through diplomacy in stead of force of arms.

PUTS AMERICAN INTERESTS FIRST

As he started on his 8,000-mile journey home from the United States he left behind an assurance of protecting American interests in the islands which, as president, he would be able to carry into effect.

"The Filipinos thrill to the knowledge that they have been raised to the estate of free men, conscious that the situation has been made possible by American appreciation of the pricelessness to all people of independence. 'There can be no doubt that as the future calls for national alignments along the lines of good will, of tariff agreements, trade advantages and the considerations which make up the warp and woof of the ties between peoples, the interest of this country will always rate first in the consideration of the Philippines.'

MAN OF MANY ACTIVITIES

It was as a patriotic citizen rather than as an oracle of his country that Quezon spoke in his final interview before starting the long journey to Manila. It was early in the morning, but he was the centre of a beehive of activity. His suite presented a scene that called on every resource of the quick, eager energy Leon Gordon so vividly recorded for posterity in a recently completed portrait that Quezon is taking across the Pacific with him.

He talked while posing for a sketch. "You'll have to sit there," he pointed, "so the artist can go on working, too."

In an adjoining room, his retinue of secretaries and aides buzzed busily. From time to time one would make his appearance to put a tersely answered question to Quezon.

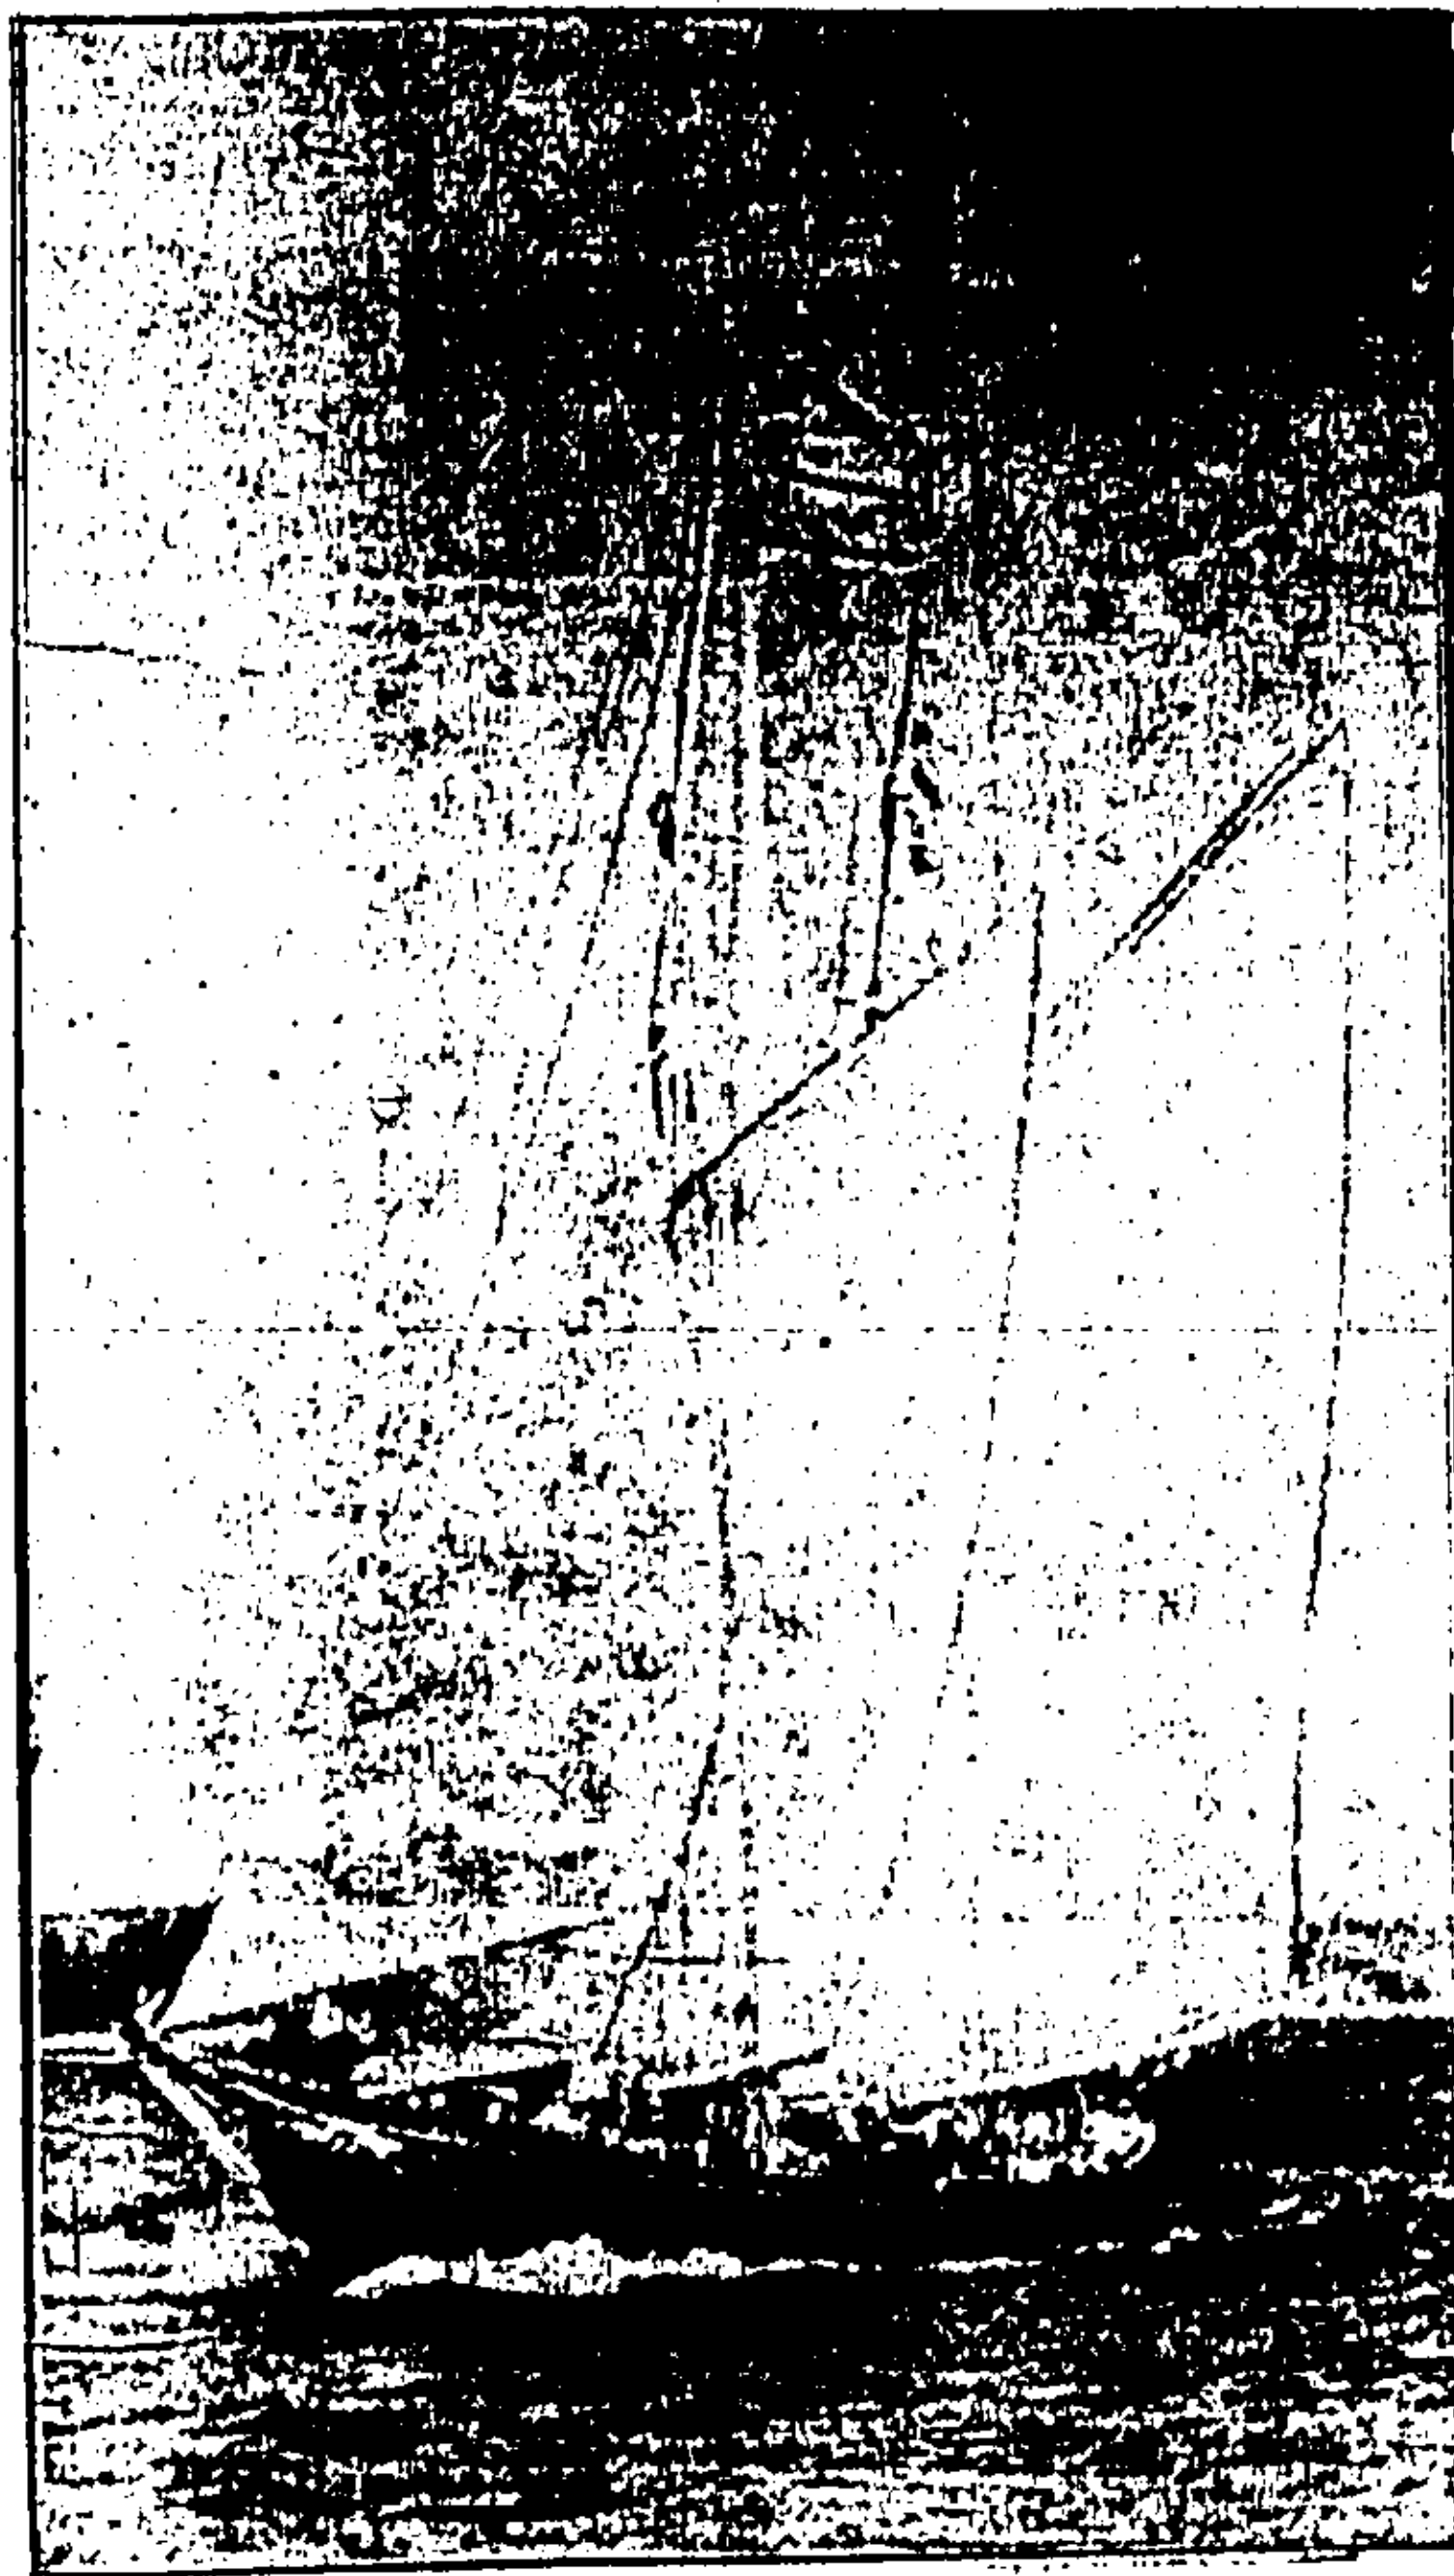

"I am leaving for Manila firm in the belief that the forthcoming inauguration of the Philippine commonwealth will inaugurate a new era and a new relationship between your people and mine that will surprise the great nations of the world by its accomplishment," he asserted.

SEES FUTURE AS UNCERTAIN

Regarding the political future of the islands, he would only say: "Events shape and reshape themselves with startling rapidity in the Orient these days. A year or two may produce results and reactions that no mind could to-day be expected to forecast."

As he journeys westward there echoes his heartfelt appreciation for the island's independence.

"No nation in history has ever done so magnanimous and so unselfish an act as has been performed by the United States in granting the Philippines their independence. This act was not the result of revolution or duress. It was the voluntary act of a great nation in granting to a small dependent country the right of self-determination. Time can never remove from the minds of my people—those of this or any other generation—an appreciation of this act—unprecedented in the history of nations."

ADDISON'S DISEASE

NEW TREATMENT FOR OLD ILLS

Detroit. New treatments for Addison's disease, neuroses, and pernicious anemia and a new technique for building immunity against infectious diseases were reported in papers presented before the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Three of the four advances grew out of experiments upon the adrenal glands. These glands, triangular bodies about half the size of your thumb, are perched, one on each kidney, like a cocked paper hat on the head of a New Year's Eve celebrator.

Dr. Arthur Grollman and Dr.

W. M. Firor of the Johns Hopkins medical school announced perfection of a method by which cortin, the hormone of powerful chemical substance secreted by the outer layer or cortex of the adrenal gland, can be made to combine with charcoal. This charcoal compound can then be taken through the mouth. In the stomach, the cortin is set loose from the charcoal. It is believed that this will prove a suitable treatment for Addison's disease.

NEUROSIS AND SHEEP

Addison's disease, characterized by changes in the pigments of the skin, general muscular weakness, and derangement of the digestive process is fatal.

The possibility that cortin might constitute a treatment for neuroses and other nervous conditions was seen in experiments reported by Dr. H. S. Liddell, Dr. O. D. Anderson, Dr. E. Kotyuka, and Dr.

F. A. Hartman of Cornell University.

Sheep were made to respond to stimuli which were so much alike it was impossible for the animal clearly to distinguish between them. A condition known as "experimental neurosis" was thus established.

When the sheep were given adrenalin, the hormone secreted by the central portion of the adrenal glands, their nervous condition was accentuated. But the sheep were calmed and their nervous responses improved by injections of cortin. It was believed cortin might prove suitable treatment for certain nervous conditions in human beings.

HYPNOSIS AID

The use of a cortico-adrenal extract to increase immunity against infectious diseases was seen in experiments reported by Dr. C. A. Fox and Dr. R. W. Whitehead of

TWO EXECUTIONS

BIAS BAY COMMANDER SENT TO DOOM

Canton, June 17.
A further naval sensation was caused to-day by the sudden execution, by order of the General Headquarters, of Tsai Teng-hui, commanding the anti-piracy forces at Bias Bay and his chief of staff, Yang Hsuan.
The execution orders declare that Tsai was guilty of secretly possessing a large quantity of arms and giving aid to the pirates instead of suppressing them.
Both prisoners are natives of Wuyang District, where the Tungchow piracy gang landed and escaped.
General Tsai Teng-hui formerly held the post of commander of a division of the Kwangtung Army. —Reuter.

13 MILLION STAMPS

HONGKONG POST OFFICE REPORT

Last year the Hongkong public purchased a total of 13,509,183 postage stamps from the Hongkong postal department, according to statistics issued in the Annual Report of the Postmaster General, Mr. M. J. Breen. The total revenue from this source was $1,142,099.
Five cent stamps proved the most popular 4,888,080 being sold. Next in popularity were the two cent stamps, used for local postage for unsealed envelopes. Over two million of these were sold.
A total of 1,634,400 ten cent stamps, used for postage on letters within the British Empire, were also purchased by the public.
A surprisingly large demand arose for post cards, 14,970 one cent and 7,180 four cent cards being sold.
The month preceding Christmas was the busiest for stamp clerks, the total revenue in November being $112,336. September was the slackest month, the sales falling to $83,072.

DINA HOUSE

NEW BUILDING IN DUDDELL ST.

The need for more residential flats in the centre of the City will be met with the completion shortly of the new Dina House building which has a frontage of 115 feet to Duddell Street and a depth of 87 feet at the ground floor level. The lower floors will be utilised as offices, while the upper floors will be devoted to flats, moderate rates being charged.
The architect of the new building which will be eight storeys in height, is Mr. Leslie Ross, F.R.I.B.A.
Of the eight storeys, the first, second and third will be given over to offices, while the upper five will have ample provision for no less than 25 flats.
The flats will have one, two or three rooms of varying sizes and are intended for bachelors preferably, or married couples without children.
Almost every flat will have a balcony, or if situated at the rear of the building will be provided with a large terrace. All flats will be entirely self-contained, with entrance halls, bathrooms and kitchens, fitted with every convenience of the most up-to-date sort.
The sixth, seventh and eighth floors will be fitted with sliding shutters to the windows, thus affording residents protection against the morning sun.
All flats will have their own servants' quarters conveniently built away from the main building.

Relief From Insomnia Through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Counting imaginary sheep as they pass through a gap in a hedge, though an old advice to sufferers from insomnia, is unfortunately not an infallible cure for this distressing complaint, which is primarily a nervous one. When the nerves are in a state of exhaustion, digestion is upset, pains in the back and limbs beset you, sleep becomes impossible. With lack of adequate sleep your symptoms grow worse, you become depressed in body and mind, which quickly leads to a nervous breakdown with its attendant ills.
At the first signs of insomnia, your most urgent need is to build up the blood since the nerves depend for their nourishment on the blood. To create new rich, red blood in abundance there is nothing to surpass the hospital tested remedy Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the world renowned blood and nerve tonic which has restored health and strength to countless sufferers from nervous disorders during the past fifty years.

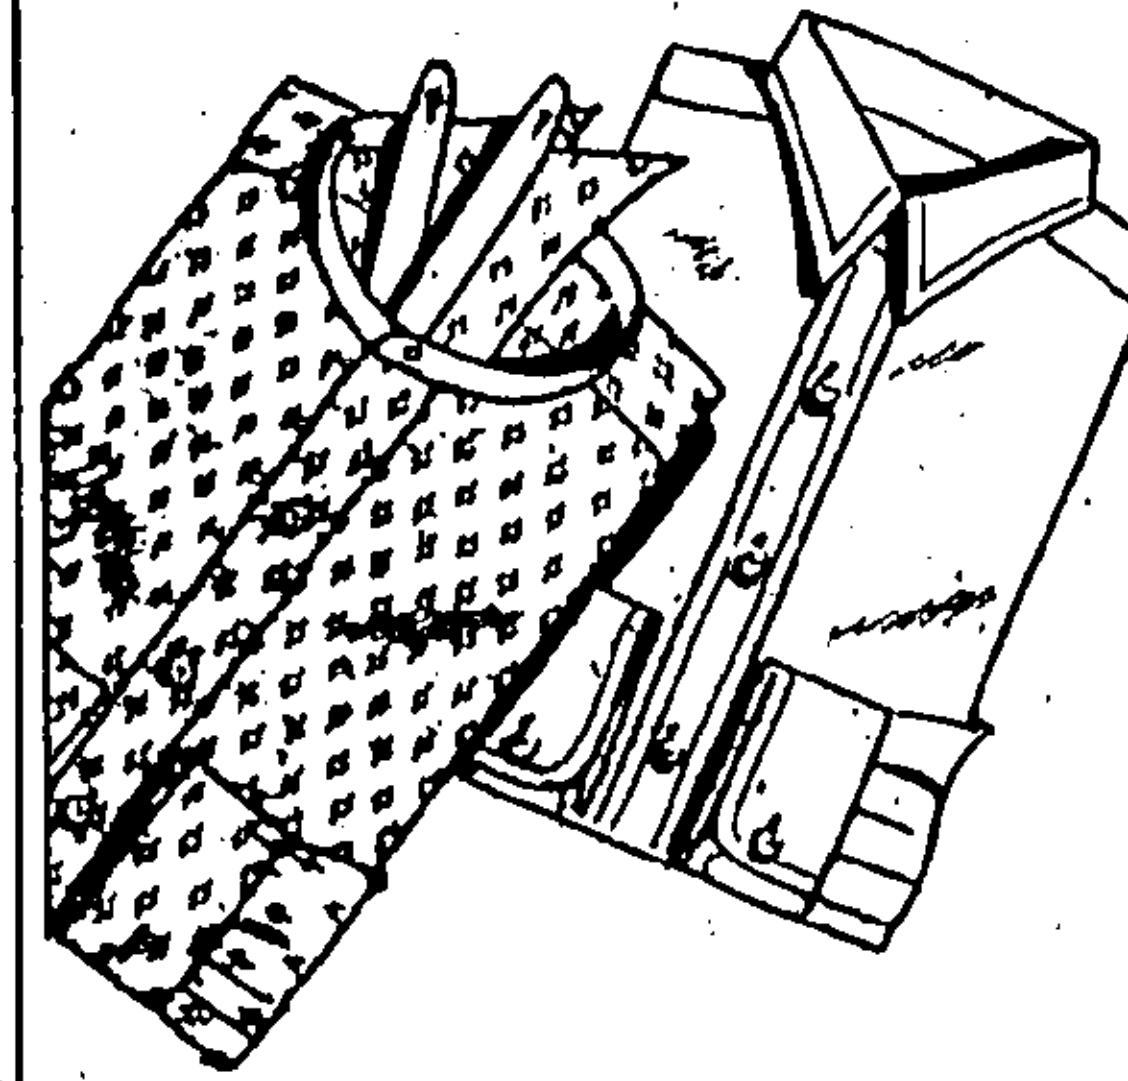

If you are suffering from overstrain through work or worry, if you cannot sleep properly, have a poor appetite, are troubled with your digestion, are ageing prematurely, feel tired even after slight exertion, when elusive pains assail you, do not delay, for all these are indications that your blood has become impoverished.
Begin to-day a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; they will surely do you good. Obtainable at chemists everywhere.

The road, the building has a reinforced frame, with pilasters running through the lower two floors, and a wide projecting cornice and plinth above. It will be generally finished with Shanghai plaster, with coloured plaster worked in chosen positions to give a pleasing effect to the whole.
Throughout the building the windows are of steel and the wood floors of teak parquet.

The ground floors and basements comprise four separate premises each of an approximate area of 1,800 square feet.
The main entrance to the upper floors is centrally situated facing Duddell Street and leads to the lifts and main stairway.

THE PHILIPPINES PROBLEM

A distinct step forward in the realisation of Philippines independence is marked by the announcement of Mr. Frank Murphy, the Governor General, that September 17 has been fixed as the date on which the Commonwealth elections will be held. The plebiscite recently held showed a tremendous majority in favour of the new Constitution; it now remains for Filipino electors to vote for the first time for their own President, who will nominally control the destinies of the islands until independence becomes absolute ten years hence. Although there is general agreement that the transition period may be one of some difficulty, optimism is felt as to the future of the islands. For the next ten years, the United States will still remain responsible for protection of the Philippines. Congress recently passed a law authorising appointment of a military mission to the islands, and America will retain the right to intervene in Philippine affairs until the decade expires. The situation at the moment, and to some extent the future also, is somewhat influenced by the fears felt in some quarters that Japan may cast covetous eyes on the territory, and it is thus thought that an untoward combination of circumstances might lead the United States into an extremely difficult position, even after the task of getting out of the islands had formally begun. It is of interest, therefore, to note four suggestions, which have just been put forward by Mr. Raymond Leslie Buell on behalf of the American Foreign Policy Association. He suggests that it might be better to grant independence right away, so as to avoid the difficult transition period; the signing of a reciprocity agreement between the United States and the Philippines, to save the islanders from economic collapse; the employment by the new Philippine Republic of expert advisers nominated by some such body as the League of Nations; and an international agreement among the Pacific Powers to guarantee

NOTES OF THE DAY

FLYING FOR ALL

Herr Kronfeld's flight in an engine glider from London to Paris at a cost of barely 6s. for petrol and oil brings flying for the million appreciably nearer. Low-powered aircraft are clearly destined to do for the air what the light car has done for the roads. This flight between two capitals has shown something of their potentialities. It is now possible to own a machine which costs no more than an inexpensive motor-car; and to fly it for 5s. an hour. Besides being cheap and easy to manipulate, the engine glider has a low landing speed, which is a safety factor of no small importance to the intending pilot. The day is coming when most people will fly as a natural mode of transport. Cheaper flight will be of great service in encouraging air-mindedness. The light aeroplane is being rapidly developed abroad, notably in France, where the "flying flea" is extremely popular, and German America and to some extent Britain, are studying this field of progress.

TAKING THE SKY TRAILS

Dr. Harlow Shapley recently told an "Open Night" audience at Harvard Observatory that in the last thirteen years 30,000 to 40,000 persons have visited the great astronomical research station in Cambridge, which periodically opens its doors to the public in the interest of widening popular knowledge of the cosmos. Progress in photography and the spectroscopic investigation of stellar light have greatly strengthened the ties of interest which have been built up in recent years between astronomers and laymen. The routine work of the professional astronomer is highly technical and pains-taking. The vast bulk of it is accomplished not by visual observation of the heavens but by extremely refined photographic methods. Expert interpretation of the product of telescope and camera is essential, and the advances achieved in equipment are immensely valuable in popularizing the revelations of the "sky patrol." Four motor-driven telescopic cameras record the happenings above Harvard's new Oak Ridge station in Massachusetts throughout every clear night of the year, and mechanized observation of the sky is continuous at many other points throughout the world. Astronomy to-day leaves no stone unturned to enrich its knowledge of the cosmic creation. And the observations of laymen are encouraged through organized methods of reporting the flights of meteors and the study of variable stars. Real contributions to natural science have resulted from astronomy's refusal to "high hat" the man in the street. The gain in culture which has resulted from this entente cordiale between specialist and layman is worth noting, and the perspective realised from contact with supergalactic interests is one of unimagined splendour. The modern observatory has made it possible in a striking sense for the layman to put Emerson's advice into play and to hitch "his wagon to a star."

TO-DAY'S MOTORING HINT

FABRIC UNIVERSAL JOINTS

The car will run for thousands of miles before the need arises for renewing the fabric of the universal joints. In course of time wear becomes noticeable and it is then that a repair should be effected to what is a vital part of the transmission system. Many owner-drivers are keen to do all they can themselves, but it is not advisable for them to tackle this job. Fitting a piece of leather or ordinary fabric may appear to be all that is needed, but this is not so in practice. It is essential that specially prepared fabric be used. Special discs are made for the purpose, these being formed of a number of layers of patent fabric arranged with the threads at angles. A direct pull is provided between each pair of bolt holes. Even these special discs require careful fitting, so it is better to entrust the work to a skilled mechanic.

neutralisation of the islands. In granting the Philippines independence, the United States is attempting to do two things: do justice to the Filipino people, and rid itself of a potentially embarrassing entanglement. It may therefore be that some such programme as has been suggested might produce the results desired in a better way than is now proposed. Be that as it may, it would certainly be an ironic stroke of fate if the Philippines question should involve the United States in trouble after it had formally started to withdraw.

SIX PENNY FLIGHT TO PARIS

By ROBERT KRONFELD

Robert Kronfeld is an Austrian gliding expert, who a few days ago made a remarkable flight from Croydon to Paris in his tiny single-seater gliding plane, which is provided with a 5-h.p. motorcycle engine, and is capable of a speed of 65 m.p.h. The flight cost him less than 6s. for fuel. Herr Kronfeld, it will be remembered, in 1931 won the £1,000 prize offered by The Daily Mail for the first gliding flight across the Channel and back. In this article he discusses the developments to be expected in aviation from the new form of flight.

MY object in undertaking the London to Paris flight was to show that flying to-day is well within the means of the average person—just as cheap and every bit as safe as the small touring car.

Yesterday's achievement was no fantastic stunt. I was simply showing how easy it is for anyone to fly. My wife has been among my many pupils, and she has learned to fly a glider in a few lessons, and was able to take over full command of a glider with a small motor like the one I used yesterday after only one week of tuition.

The glider I brought over with me is to be delivered to a French firm, who intend to build it in series for the French public. That shows the interest in these gliders which is being taken over here in France.

I must say that in England also I am continually being asked about gliders; and I do really think that it would be of immense use to the British public, not only for sporting purposes but also for the really important objective of making as many young people as possible air-minded, if the science of gliding were to become more widely known.

For young men and young girls I cannot think of any more useful and at the same time entrancing pastime than learning to use a glider.

A start may be made with a simple glider, and then the beginner may go on to a glider with a small motor—a runabout plane, as it might be called, such as the one I used in my Paris flight.

Remember that for that flight I used under four gallons of petrol, and some 6d. worth of oil. The journey thus cost me barely 5s. 6d.—far cheaper than if I had packed the machine up and delivered it as freight.

Not long ago I had to deliver just such a glider in France, and the carriage cost me nearly £19. Think of the difference! I came over for less than 6s.

The taxicab journey from Le Bourget aerodrome to Paris cost me more!

I had a very good journey with good air conditions, but if I had had a contrary wind I should have got over just the same. With my machine I can fly extremely low, and can therefore seek an altitude where wind velocity does not hinder me.

My machine takes off in 80 yards, just like the majority of planes, but, instead of having to continue running in a straight line after rising, I can turn within the limits of my take-off field and gradually rise in a spiral, practically like an autogiro.

A field of 200 yards in length is quite sufficient for me to take to the air. I can land at 18 miles per hour, and therefore I need not fear a crash. Should I have to land on rough ground I simply sit down.

Now imagine what a wonderful sporting achievement it would be if we could have hundreds of gliding clubs in England, and tens of thousands of young men and women gliders taking off from almost any flat field or piece of common ground; able to take an evening gliding flight for 30 or 40 miles out into the country and back, or go to Scotland for a week-end from Surrey.

When I landed in Paris my petrol tank was barely half empty. I could have continued my journey for about another 250 miles, which would have taken me to near Geneva.

And to think that because I thought I needed all that petrol I almost overloaded myself and for the first time took a large parachute with me!

Both the British and the French Air Ministries, it should be pointed out, are eager to help this new movement in cheap flying, and it is thanks to both of them that I was able to obtain the necessary permits without difficulty.

There are heaps of people who want to fly but who cannot do so because of the cost. They must have a cheap machine on which they can rely.

In trying to create this cheap plane small wing loading has been made a feature, as experience has proved that machines with a light weight per square foot are extremely safe.

With the machine with which I crossed over yesterday—a B.A.C. Drone—all kinds of risky things can be done which could not be attempted with an ordinary plane. There is no danger of stalling.

A flight of 800 to 1,000 miles would be possible with this same machine equipped with a bigger tank.

I may point out that the B.A.C. Drone is fitted with a 600 c.c. Douglas engine developed out of a standard motor-cycle. It is practically the same as that of the (Continued on Next Column.)

LITTLE RULER OF LOVE

The Honolulu Gas Company,

Gen. Supt.

Dear Sir:

I want to ask you for few minutes of your time because I am and old time Gas man.

I don't smoke, chew, drink nor gamble, and I feel that you would never be sorry for giving me this chance of my life because I am ready to be married to a Little Lady who Holds my Heart. She has told me that as soon as I can get a job in your city She will become my wife.

I trust that the Little Ruler of Love will Speak to you for one year any way.

Hoping to hear from you soon I remain

Yours lovingly,

Gentlemen:

In answer to your letter asking me if I'm worried about the $10.00 I owe you, let me reply that I'm not. There's no use our both worrying about it.

Yours truly,

Dear Sirs:

I want to be a hot jockey and ride the fastest horses. My love of animals is because I followed Father down the streets as he cleaned up after them. Have never ridden a horse but I sure want to be a jockey.

Make me an offer and I will consider coming to California.

Dear Celia:

motorcycle, but with small modifications for aviation purposes.

The glider which I have just delivered cost $275. The French glider company, however, with the subsidies which are given for such craft by the French Air Ministry, hope to be able to deliver to their clients a glider built in series at from something like $150 to $180.

That is the proper spirit. There is no doubt that we are now in the Flying Age. For the spirit and knowledge of flying to be spread everywhere among our youth we want flying gliders to be available for them as cheaply as a runabout car, and soon, perhaps, almost as cheaply as a motor-cycle.

KING'S ABSENCE FROM ASCOT

MANY FOREIGN COMPETITORS

JUBILEE MEETING TO-DAY

London, June 17. There is great disappointment owing to the unavoidable absence of the King from Jubilee Ascot, which begins to-morrow. H. M. the Queen will, however, drive to the course every day accompanied by the Prince of Wales.

This will be only the second Ascot that the King has missed since 1909. The course is in perfect condition but the question is, will the present foul weather continue and spoil the gaiety of the women's dresses? The unbeaten French colt, Brantome, is competing in the Gold Cup. The famous American horse, Twenty Grand, winner of the Kentucky of 1931, is competing in the Queen Anne Stakes.

Other famous French horses are to compete at the meeting, and there is little hope of a Royal victory since the King's two fillies, Feola and Parity, entered in the Queen Mary's Stakes are hardly good enough.

To-morrow's feature will be the appearance of the Aga Khan's Bahram, fresh from his Epsom triumphs who is considered a certainty for the St. James's Palace Stakes.

There is a record number of entries, namely three hundred, whose total value is estimated at half a million sterling.

The stakes money exceed £70,000. —Reuter's Special.

5,365 DOLLARS DISTRIBUTED

Allocations to charity from the proceeds of the Sunday Herald Cup Competition were made by the Hongkong Football Association Council at its monthly meeting held at the Sports Club yesterday evening.

Major C. M. Manners, Chairman of the Council, presided at the meeting. It was announced that a sum of $5,365.99 was available for charity, and the following sums were allotted: Hongkong Benevolent Society $1,000

Hongkong Society for Protection of Children 700

Children's Playground Association 500

Society of St. Vincent de Paul 500

Sailors' Home and Mission to Seamen 500

G.C.H. Christmas Tree Fund (already paid) 50

A report from the League Management Committee, suggesting that the Association should inform the secretaries of the various clubs to the effect that non-fulfilment of League fixtures would be regarded as a serious breach of the Association's rules, was read and approved by the Council.

With regard to the application of the Chung Wah Football Club for affiliation to the Association, it was pointed out that the acceptance of this application, as it stood, would give rise to a lot of confusion as there is already a club affiliated to the Association with that name.

The Hon. Secretary was asked to write to the secretary of the new club informing him of the position, and to see what could be done regarding the name.

It was agreed that the Annual General Meeting of the Association be held on Monday, July 15.

The next Council meeting will be held on July 2.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, June 17. The following reports on the New York Stock market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's market: Stocks to-day were irregular. Silver and copper issues eased, due to lower world prices and the situation regarding investment. Utility shares firmed on hopes of some modification of the Wheeler-Rogers Utility Holding Company Bill. Bonds were upward, led by railroad issues. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregularly higher. Utility issues were strong.

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks were moderately easy as traders are standing aside. Mill activity is estimated at 38.5 per cent. of capacity, compared with 39.0 per cent. the previous week.

New York and Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:—

Cotton: The market is featureless, awaiting some action by Washington. Demand for "spot" cotton is poor and mill curtailment continues.

Wheat: There was some covering by short interests and rains in the South-West. Prices are possibly moderately higher on the oversold condition of the market. The visible supply of wheat shows a decrease of 2,207,000 bushels.

Corn: There is a further delay in planting and there are rains in the Central Belt, which are not wanted. The visible supply of corn has decreased by 1,000,000 bushels.

Rubber: There are threats of a minor strike in Akron. The market is very steady.

Sugar: The market is stagnant and featureless.

HONGKONG LUXURIES

MORE CIGARETTES BUT LESS LIQUOR

Although Hongkong is feeling the pinch of depression, it can still afford certain luxuries.

Last year the public paid $30,544 in excess of the estimated revenue of $276,000 for import duty on Motor Spirit, while the estimate of $15,000 for licences for motor vehicles was exceeded by $13,333.

In his Annual Reports for 1934, the Colonial Treasurer states that the excess over the estimates was caused through the importation into the Colony of more foreign motor vehicles.

Increased consumption of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco was responsible for an excess revenue of $153,834 over the estimate of $2,900,000.

But although the Hongkong public used more motor cars, drove increased mileage, and smoked more cigars and cigarettes, it drank less liquor. The actual revenue from liquor duties fell $80,828 short of the estimated revenue of one million dollars. This decrease was reflected in the decreased revenue for liquor licences, a decrease attributed by the Colonial Treasurer to the trade depression.

The Other Side

A sidelight on the depression that exists in Hongkong is given in the Annual Report on the Finances of the Colony for 1934, tabled in the Legislative Council by the Hon. Mr. E. Taylor, Colonial Treasurer, last week.

CALLES FLEES

BLOODLESS REVOLT IN MEXICO

Mexico City, June 17. General Cardenas has assembled all loyal troops at the capital, which is now virtually under martial law.

Meanwhile the veteran President, whose break with General Calles is one of the sensations of Mexico's turbulent history, is rushing his plans for the organisation of a Labour Government to replace the semi-dictatorial Cabinet of yesterday.

It seems apparent now that President Cardenas has secured a bloodless victory over Calles, who is reported to have left Oaxaca Estates for the hacienda of a friend in the state of Morelos.

It is rumoured that Calles is planning to leave Mexico shortly.

The significance of his dramatic move for apparent leadership of Mexico is at the moment obscure. Labour unions and student revolutionaries are supporting President Cardenas, who is hailed as the victor.

A throng of 10,000 Catholic victims of the religious persecution that has been waged in Mexico for the past ten years have jumped at the opportunity caused by the bloodless revolt to demand religious freedom.

They gathered outside the Capitol building this morning, shouting "Down with Calles!"

Officials insist that the country is calm, and deny reports of impending violence. Nevertheless, precautions are being rushed to prevent the possibility of a surprise forceful opposition move. —United Press.

Calles Interviewed

Mexico City, June 17. In a public statement issued shortly after his departure for Morelos, General Calles said that he did not desire to interfere in public affairs.

He added that he was departing in order to end the situation created by his statement of criticism of Labour and political conditions, which had resulted in the break with President Cardenas.

His statement is seen as a peace gesture, and indicates his probable complete retirement from politics.

His recent statement, he said, had been issued at the request of a group of Senators, who had asked him for his opinion regarding different political and social matters.

"Unfortunately," said Calles, "my statements may have served to create the belief that I aspire to intervene in public affairs. This I have no desire to do."

General Calles added that he was departing for the province of Sinaloa by aeroplane to-morrow. —United Press.

Mrs. G. R. Sayer is to distribute the prizes at the annual speech day of the Diocesan Boys' School at 5.15 p.m. on July 12. The chief speakers will be the Director of Education and the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall.

distress warrants and writs of executions totalled $32,473, as against the estimated total of $22,000. Five years ago the income under this heading was only $12,000.

Fewer pupils attended public schools, many Chinese parents finding the fees too high. The revenue from school fees last year fell short of the estimated revenue of $285,000 by $41,434.

THE FAR EAST

CAUTIOUS STATEMENT IN COMMONS

London, June 17. The Foreign Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, in the course of a statement to the House of Commons on the situation in China, said that for various reasons the effects on China of the World Economic Depression were delayed.

For some months past the economic situation had been one of undoubted difficulty and the position had been further complicated by the recent rise in the price of silver.

As the House was aware the Government were closely and sympathetically following developments and they had now arranged that Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, the Chief Economic Adviser to the British Government, should proceed to China at an early date in order that he may be in a position to advise them on the situation.

Internal Politics

Despite the financial crisis the political situation during the recent months had not been unfavourable. There were signs of steady progress towards order and stability and signs that the Central Government's campaign against the Communists was contributing towards the extension of this authority and influence.

North China

In North China there had been disquieting developments during the past two weeks. Reports were contradictory in certain details and the situation liable to rapid change.

It appeared that the Japanese Military Authorities had made representations regarding persons and organisations, alleged to be hostile to them in the demilitarised zone fixed by the terms of the Armistice of Tangku.

The local Chinese authorities took measures to meet these representations. Certain points remain outstanding still and appear to be the subject of a local discussion.

"With regard to the most recent developments in North China I have been in consultation with the British representatives in Tokyo and Nanking, and, through them, with both the Chinese and Japanese Governments. These communications are still continuing." —Reuter.

CHANCES OF WAR

MR. CORDELL HULL ON U. S. POSITION

Annabors, June 17. Addressing students of Michigan University the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, referred to the still further deterioration of the international situation.

He did not think that a new World War was inevitable, nor did he believe that a major war abroad would involve the United States. Nevertheless America could not in the long run avoid its disastrous results.

Mr. Cordell Hull added that any nation that did not co-operate in the control of armaments was retarding the progress of the world and should be branded. —Reuter.

One case of Typhoid Fever and two cases of Meningitis were reported to the local Health authorities over the week-end.

South Africans Made To Follow On

WICKETS FALL FAST IN TRENT BRIDGE CRICKET TEST

London, June 17. After the heavy rain of yesterday afternoon, the wicket was drying rapidly under the influence of sunshine and wind. As might be expected under such circumstances, R. E. S. Wyatt, the English captain, decided to declare with Saturday's total of 384 for seven wickets and let the South Africans make what they could of it.

The weather was fine and sunny when the South Africans commenced their innings before a crowd of 3,000 spectators. The pace of the wicket was easy.

After Bowes, Nichols, Verity and Robins had had spells with the ball, the attack was evened out in the hands of Robins and Nichols. The latter was lifting the ball occasionally.

The South African opening batsmen, I. J. Siedle and B. Mitchell, were on the defensive until Siedle drove Robins past cover to the boundary ropes for the first boundary hit of the innings.

Scoring was exceptionally slow, Siedle taking 51 minutes to get into double figures.

Mitchell hit a couple of boundaries and was then bowled by Nichols who sent down a ball which came up very fast off the pitch. He had been batting for 65 minutes for his 25 runs.

The score-board showed 42 runs when Mitchell left.

Siedle was joined by E. A. Rowan, one of the most accomplished batsmen in the touring side. The new-comer settled down quickly and hit four to the on-boundary to hoist the half century in 68 minutes.

At lunch time, Siedle and Rowan were still together. They had meanwhile taken the score to 38 for one wicket.

SIEDLE'S FINE SHOTS

Siedle was hitting some fine shots to the leg side, especially off Verity, the Yorkshire bowler. He had 47 to his credit and Rowan 20.

The crowd had swelled to 3,000 when the game was resumed after lunch. During the interval, there was a shower.

Without any addition to the score, Rowan was dismissed. He was caught behind the stumps by the wicket-keeper, Ames, who was standing up to the bowling of Robins. He was attempting a late cut when he snicked the ball into Ames' gloves.

A. D. Nourse, of whom great things were expected, turned out to be a disappointment. He stayed long enough to make only four runs. He crashed Robins to the off boundary, to send up the 100 in 162 minutes.

He then gave a "dolly" catch to Hammond, fielding second slip, off Verity shortly afterwards. The ball cocked up suddenly.

Siedle, who had been batting very patiently all the while, was the next man to return to the pavilion. With his score at 59 he was bowled by the Yorkshire left-hander. He had contributed almost half his side's score of 120 for four wickets.

He reached his 50 with a leg boundary off Verity after being at the wicket for 160 minutes. He lost his wicket through attempting to make a big hit to leg. His innings was faultless, and included in his 59 were six boundary strokes. Altogether he batted for 176 minutes.

H. B. Cameron, the South African wicket-keeper, joined his captain, who at that stage was not out with five runs. Cameron at once showed that he was in an aggressive mood. Although Wade had been at the wicket for some little time Cameron quickly overhauled him.

CAMERON AGGRESSIVE

When the score had been taken to 146 for four wickets, Cameron had 17 while Wade could only claim ten.

Three fours in an over by Cameron off Robins helped the South Africans to hoist the 150, which was reached after 220 minutes' play.

At 29, Cameron gave a difficult chance to Mitchell-Innes in the slips off Bowes. The ball kept low and was not accepted by the Oxford player.

Misfortune befell the South Africans when Wade mistimed a shot and was caught by Nichols in the slips off Verity.

The South African captain had contributed only 18, but he had seen the score taken from 103 to 174 for five wickets. He was at the crease for 105 minutes.

Shortly afterwards, Cameron got his 50.

Ten was then taken, Cameron having exactly 50 and K. G. Viljoen four.

The score was 190 for five wickets. The old saying that interval is the best change bowler was borne out after tea.

When play resumed, Cameron could only add two runs to his score. He was bowled by Nichols.

The score-board read 198 for six. Cameron played on after being at the wickets for 115 minutes, during which time he hit eight fours, the feature of his innings being fine drives on the leg side.

Vincent was out from the second ball he received, and with the score at 25, for 8, Viljoen had his off stump removed by one of Nichols' expresses. Langston was unable to score and Crisp was caught at cover by Robins. Nichols again being the lucky bowler. The innings closed for 220.

Following on Siedle was caught by Verity at short square-leg off Nichols for two runs, in the third over of the innings. Mitchell and Rowan then played out time.

SERIAL STORY

The DARK BLOND

by CARLETON KENDRICK

CHAPTER XLVII

Sergeant Mahoney stopped the car in front of the apartment house. "I have been thinking," he said, "about Gentry. You say that he tried a key to apartment 309 and it wouldn't work."

"That's right."

"Then, until he got to apartment 309 he must have thought the key was going to work."

"Yes. Why?"

"In that event," he said, "he must have used the key to get into the apartment house. In other words, he must have opened the outer door with that key."

She stared at him, her forehead showing lines of bewilderment.

"In other words," Mahoney said, "someone gave Gentry a key to apartment 309. That someone had another apartment in the house and must have given Gentry the key to that apartment instead of the door of the apartment house itself."

Both keys would open the door of the apartment house. The key which the conspirators couldn't be surprised by anyone with a pass-key.

Milliecent recognized the logic of his remarks. "Good heavens, yes! And perhaps that other apartment is where—"

"Exactly," he interrupted. "Now that apartment must be on the third floor. Norman was carried from apartment 309. He would never leave it voluntarily. They would hardly have taken him up or down stairs."

Sergeant Mahoney stepped from the car, rang the bell of the apartment marked "MANAGER." At the third ring a speaking tube whistled. A woman's voice said, "If this is a tenant who's forgotten a key, I'll open the door. If it's someone who wants an apartment, come back at a decent hour."

"It's the police," Sergeant Mahoney said. "Open the door and meet us in the corridor with a pass-key."

A moment later the door buzzed open. Sergeant Mahoney pushed his way into the apartment.

Milliecent saw a big, blond woman with a white, frightened face, hugging a kimono about herself.

Sergeant Mahoney showed her his badge. "Give me a pass-key," he said.

She handed him the pass-key. Sergeant Mahoney escorted Milliecent to the elevator, slid back the door of the cage, pressed the button for the third floor.

"When you get to that floor," he said, "get out and run up and down the corridor screaming, 'Norman, where are you?' After that, no matter what happens, act naturally—that is, be frightened. Don't let on that you know the police have the place surrounded. For your information, I am surrounded by where they can come to your rescue whenever I give the signal, but I don't want to do that."

until I've got some incriminating evidence."

She nodded.

"Good luck," he told her, stepped from the elevator and let the door close.

As the closing door made the electrical contact, the elevator lurched upward. It jolted to a stop at the third floor. Milliecent saw a deserted corridor. She screamed, "Norman, Norman! Where are you?" and ran the length of the corridor.

Some man should through a closed door, "Pipe down. I want to sleep."

A door opened. A strange man stepped into the corridor.

"Are you looking for the man who was hurt in apartment 309?" he asked.

"Yes," Milliecent said, and such was her eagerness to locate Norman that she forgot for the moment she entirely forgot she was bait for a death trap.

He found him in the corridor," the man said. "He was unconscious. I took him in here and have been waiting for him to regain consciousness so I could find out what happened. He's not badly hurt."

Milliecent ran swiftly to the door of the apartment. The man stood to one side. Looking past him, Milliecent saw a couch. On the couch, covered by a blanket, lay Norman Hupp.

There was a gash on his forehead on which dry blood had encrusted. His eyes were closed.

"Norman!" Milliecent screamed.

Norman shouted, "Run, Millie. Call the police!"

A woman's voice screamed an epithet, a gun roared.

Norman Hupp had swung himself off the couch as he called his warning. Milliecent saw that his hands were tied behind his back as he dove, head first, to the floor. A bullet ripped the davenport where his head had been. Another bullet tore through the upholstery, sending cloth, sending wire springs.

The strange man who had stood in the doorway struck at Milliecent's head with a blackjack. Somehow—she did not know how—she avoided that blow and sped toward Norman Hupp.

Through an open door which led to the kitchen she saw Dick Gentry, an automatic in his hand, his lips twisted into an evil leer, taking deliberate aim at Norman Hupp's struggling figure.

Milliecent screamed, lunged forward. The gun roared. She heard the impact of a bullet striking something solid as, with a savagery which surprised her, she lunged herself upon Dick Gentry and realized she was holding his wrist, struggling with him for the automatic.

"You little she-devil!" he exclaimed, as her teeth sank into his hand, "Take that!"

He kicked at her. The gun roared again. Something struck her in the side with numbing force. She heard a terrific roar, felt Dick Gentry grow suddenly limp. Sergeant Mahoney's voice, sounding deadly ominous, said, "Make a move and you'll get the same dose. Stick 'em up!"

Milliecent broke free as Dick Gentry collapsed to the floor. She saw Sergeant Mahoney cutting at Norman's bonds with a clasp knife, saw the strange man with his hands high above his head.

Milliecent ran to Norman, screaming, "Are you hurt?" He grimaced at her and said, "No. Why didn't you run when I warned you? Gentry was holding a gun on me. He said he'd shoot if I didn't lie perfectly still. I knew what they wanted. They wanted to get you in here. When I shouted I dove forward to dodge the bullet. A woman was with him. She ran. I couldn't see her clearly."

He straightened, rubbing his wrists. Sergeant Mahoney stepped over to Dick Gentry, slowly shook his head.

"I'm sorry, boys," he said. "I had to do it. He'd have got the girl."

Milliecent looked up then and saw that grim, silent figure had filed in to the room, figures who moved with swift efficiency, looking down the hands of the man who had lured her into the apartment, snapping handcuffs around his wrists.

"What happened, Norman?" she asked.

Sergeant Mahoney sat down beside Norman Hupp. "It's important," he said, "for us to get everything you know and get it fast. Give us the bare facts and give them quickly."

"I went to 309," Norman Hupp said. "I knocked. No one answered. I started toward the elevator. This man, nodding his head toward the handcuffed prisoner, 'stepped into the hallway. He asked me if I was a friend of Phyllis Faulconer. He said she had instructed him to let her friend into the apartment. It was a trap. I fell for it and said, 'Yes.' He let me into the apartment, struck at me with a blackjack. I was stunned but managed to tackle him."

"Dick Gentry came in. We fought all over the apartment, but they got too finally. They dragged me down to this place and have held me prisoner. I think this man is a hired thug. That's all I know."

"And by God!" said the handcuffed man, "that's all you'll ever find out. You've killed Gentry. You've got nothing on me. I thought the man was a burglar."

Sergeant Mahoney turned to him purposefully. "You," he said, "know who Phyllis Faulconer is. You know where Jarvis Hupp is. You can either talk or we'll take you to headquarters, and when we get done with you you'll be damn glad to talk."

The man, small and defenceless, "Try and make me talk," he said.

"By God," Sergeant Mahoney said, grimly, "I will."

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Every cinema goer will certainly thrill to the screen story of carefree youth which will be seen by Thursday at the Queen's Theatre. "Bachelor of Arts" is the title of this outstanding Fox production—yes, it is adapted from the famous John Erskine novel of the same title and is the most honest and "debunked" film of college life ever screened. Perhaps its greatest quality is its sense of humor. That, of course, stems directly from its author, the man who wrote "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and "Galahad," and who is even more famed as a college professor at Columbia. But the same gay and authentically lively note has been struck in direction, playing and production generally. Tom Brown and Anita Louise are seen in the two most important roles—the young campus sweethearts who meet the problems of an adult world in an adult way and not by shouting "rah-rah-rah!" There is an exceptionally fine supporting cast. Henry B. Walthall has an important role and, as his wife, Mae Marsh contributes a beautiful performance—her first since the film of her supreme success in "Birth of a Nation" 20 years ago. In "Bachelor of Arts" the campus is peopled by such engaging young people as Arline Judge, Frank Albertson, John Arledge and Frank Melton. No wonder life moves quickly at this film university. An then, to top the laughs, Stephen Fichtel appears as a slow-motion bellhop in a fraternity house.

"The Great Hotel Murder"

Screen players are much younger and better looking to-day than they were ten years ago. Many of the people whose voices are admired for their clearness and diction to-day would have failed to pass the first test a few years ago. This is the opinion of Ernest Palmer, A.S.C., one of Fox Film's ace camera men. Mr. Palmer photographed "The Great Hotel Murder." Fox Film's new mystery comedy which comes on Wednesday to the King's Theatre.

Lowell is co-featured with Victor MacLaglen in the screen version of Starr's popular Red Book mystery yarn, "Recipe for Murder." They carry two rival clowns in this John Stone production, which Eugene Forde directed. In the supporting cast are Rosemary Ames, Mary Carlisle, Henry O'Neill, C. Henry Gordon, William Jannet, Charles C. Wilson, John Wray, and others.

"Crime Doctor"

A detective photoplay hailed as a distinct departure from crime films

of the past is the achievement comprised in "The Crime Doctor" showing at the Oriental Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday. Offering a most novel treatment of the subject—the strange emotional impulses which cause a scientific murder—this picture takes the audience into a confidence from the beginning. Intense suspense is built up in this unusual manner, particularly when suspicion is cunningly centred upon an innocent man who seems destined to pay the supreme penalty. Affording another outstanding characterisation is Otto Kruger. Kruger is co-featured with Karen Morley and Nils Asther in the story which is based on the most amazing case of a great manhunter's misuse of his ability. Judith Wood and William Frawley have important roles. Kruger plays the crime investigator of the story.

As his wife, furnishes the motive for the amazing "perfect crime" of the picture. Dealing with the psychological causes of crime, the film stresses the point that deep within every person lies an instinct to kill which may be loosed under certain circumstances.

Desirable."

A new and dazzling Jean Muir entrained audiences at the Alhambra Theatre, Kowloon, by her brilliant performance in the Warner Bros. production, "Desirable," which was shown on the local screen for the first time yesterday. This rising new star was given the finest opportunity of her career in this specially for her by the famous magazine writer, Mary McCall, Jr. Miss Muir has the role of a young and unsophisticated girl who has been secluded from childhood in a boarding school by her brilliant actress mother who fears that public knowledge that she has a grown daughter will dim her own popularity.

Thrust suddenly into the giddy whirl of New York's social elite, she sends an electrical shock up and down the spines of custom bound conventional people by her outspoken truths and naturalness. George Brent gives the most convincing performance as the man-about-town, once in love with the mother, but who turns to the daughter because of her simple charm, and lack of affectation. Brent seems more spontaneous, more magnetic and compelling. He seems to have overcome a seemingly studied self-presentation and gives his real self to the character role. Verroo Teasdale is actress mother, temperamental, jealous of her own daughter to the extent of being willing to ruin her life to further her own career. Miss Teasdale gives a fiery portrayal of the madwoman who thrusts a knife into her daughter's heart, while Miss Muir rises to the highly emotional and cataclysmic scenes with all the artistry of a seasoned trouper. The entire cast is a talented one and includes John Halliday, always a finished actor, who plays the role of a theatrical angel and the lover of Miss Teasdale; Charles Starrett, as the scion of a blue-blooded, aristocratic family, whose engagement to the boarding school girl is broken, to the satisfaction of his thoroughly shocked mother; Pauline True, Joan Wheeler, Barbara Leonard and Virginia Hammond.

"The Defense Rests"

Jack Holt, hero of eighty-six virile screen adventure dramas dons the toga of the barrister for the first time in his long and notable career to present the leading character of the Columbia drama, "The Defense Rests," now playing at the Queen's Theatre. The new film is from an original story and screen play by Jo Swerling and was directed by Lambert Hillyer. Supporting the star in the leading feminine role is Jean Arthur, who scored decisively in the recent "Whirlpool" opposite Jack Holt, and which played "Most Precious Thing in Life" with Donald Cook. The remainder of the cast includes Shirley Grey, Nat Pendleton, Raymond Walburn, Sarah Padden, Donald Meek and Raymond Hatton. The story is a powerful indictment of the ruthless, sensational mouthpieces popularized by the Bill Pattons and Earl Rogers. The "Mait Mitchell" of the "Defense Rests" is a brilliant, notorious criminal lawyer who will defend anyone—at a price. His publicity-seeking tactics win him headlines which he cynically terms, "advertising money." But a comedy little law school graduate in the person of Jean Arthur comes into his life at the height of his career. Her enthusiasm and idealism concerning the profession provide a sharp contrast to Holt's cynical materialism. They share arguments with romance, and pave the way for a thrilling denouement.

"The Mighty Barnum"

"The Mighty Barnum," which 20th Century brings to the King's Theatre, is in the nature of a Centennial Celebration offering. For it was exactly one hundred years ago that P. T. Barnum, played by Wallace Deery, left his grocery store on New York City's Bowery, and launched his career as the world's greatest showman by press claimed to be 160 years ago and to have nursed George Washington in his infancy. Whether Jolco was actually a Barnum hoax or not was never determined, but a newspaper of the day devoted a flattering amount of editorial space to the question of her authenticity and even the clergy found her worthy of mention. Colonel Tom Thumb, the world's smallest man, the Cardiff Giant, the woolly horse, the Fiji mermaid, the two-headed calf and all the rest of the freaks with which clades John Halliday, always a finished actor, who plays the role of a theatrical angel and the lover of Miss Teasdale; Charles Starrett, as the scion of a blue-blooded, aristocratic family, whose engagement to the boarding school girl is broken, to the satisfaction of his thoroughly shocked mother; Pauline True, Joan Wheeler, Barbara Leonard and Virginia Hammond.

COMPANY MEETING

WALLACE HARPER AND COMPANY

Increased activity in road building in South China pointing to a bright future there for the automobile trade was mentioned by the Chairman, Mr. Wallace Harper & Co., Ltd., held on Friday.

The Chairman remarked that the profits amounted to $190,573.47 which, although gratifying in view of general conditions, was less than was anticipated from the sales at the beginning of the year. The gross profit on trading for the year amounted to $190,573.47 and after charging Administration Expenses, Depreciation, etc. the net profit is $20,821.22, which amount has been placed to the credit of Profit & Loss A/c reducing the debit balance of $76,330, carried forward from last year, to $55,508.78, which we are carrying forward to new account.

While I feel no small degree of disappointment that the final results for the year have not been as gratifying as indications in the earlier part gave reason to expect, yet I am sure you will agree that to have shown the profit we have on the year's working is no inconsiderable achievement in the face of difficulties with which business in general has had to contend.

Exchange Effects

At the risk of bringing up a subject already much discussed, I must point out to you that exchange has had a serious effect on the showing for the year. For example, the shrinkage in the value of our stocks as a result of much higher exchange rates has made a very appreciable difference to the profit for the period under review.

Furthermore, shareholders will appreciate that our profit is based on a percentage of retail prices, and with present high exchange rates our prices are about half those of a year or so ago. Hence our profit, expressed in terms of local dollars, is reduced, although the percentage remains the same. Against this, however, which is in local currency and unaffected by exchange fluctuation, remains more or less constant.

The year, however, has not been without its bright side in that it has seen the acquisition of added territory and the re-opening of a Canton branch office, as a result of which we can confidently look forward to a considerably greater and steadily increasing volume of profitable business.

Bright Future

Your company has erected, during the year, in a locality better suited to our business, more spacious and modern premises, the cost of which, under the schedule of depreciation adopted, will be entirely written off in less than five years.

The future outlook of the automobile business in China can be judged by the rapid strides being made in road construction in the interior. Many of you will doubtless be surprised to learn that the first journey ever made by motor car between Shanghai and Canton was recently accomplished by a Chinese gentleman resident in Shanghai. It is particularly interesting to note that the trip was made in an 8 h.p. Ford the type more popularly known as the "Baby Ford", and manufactured by the Ford Motor Co. of England, Ltd., Dagenham, Essex. There is much road-building activity in the South China territory which we cover and of course more roads mean more cars and trucks.

And now, Gentlemen, I beg to propose the adoption of the Annual Report and Statement of Accounts as submitted by your Directors and if someone will kindly second my proposal I shall then be glad to answer any questions you may wish to raise. The report and accounts were adopted.

The report stated:—In accordance with Article No. 76 of the Company's Articles of Association Messrs. D. L. Ballantyne, Colbourne Little, L. Jack and J. F. Shea retire from the Board. Mr. Shea now being resident in Canton does not seek re-election but Messrs. Ballantyne, Little and Jack being eligible offer themselves for re-election.

PRIEST RELEASED

BANDIT CAPTIVE GAINS HIS FREEDOM

New York, June 17. The head office in New York of the Maryknoll Mission of the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America has received advice from China that the Rev. Father Henry Bush, M.M., who was captured by bandits on the Kiangsi-Kwangtung frontier in April, has been released.

The Rev. Fr. Bush, was en route to his station at Shachin when he was captured last April. His intention was to stay with some friends there.

The incident was reported to the Bishop at Meishien, and nothing further was heard for some days.

Reports from Meishien, which report the release of Father Bush, are meagre, and do not state whether any ransom was demanded or paid.

Approximately 25 American Catholic priests are stationed in different parts of the district affected, and this is the first incident of its nature for some years. However, about twelve months ago, a Catholic priest had a narrow escape from capture from bandits in the town in which Fr. Bush was captured. The priest was visiting friends and was spending the night at the house when it was raided. The wife of the host was shot and the priest himself kidnapped, but the priest escaped by climbing over the wall.

Father Bush is a native of Medford, Mass. He came to China about two years ago and has been stationed in the Shachin district since then.—United Press.

Reuter adds that Father Bush, was rescued by Chinese troops under the command of Huang Pi on the border of Kiangsi and Kwangtung.

Father Bush is now proceeding with an escort of soldiers to Shihchung.

OIL MONOPOLY

CONDITIONS THAT FORCED OUT FOREIGN CONCERNS

London, June 17. Replying to Captain Peter Macdonald (C), (Isle of Wight), the Foreign Secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, said that no reply had been received from Japan to the British protest against the establishment of the Oil Monopoly in Manchukuo.

Meanwhile the monopoly had come into force under such circumstances that the British and American Oil Companies had decided that they had no alternative but to withdraw from the market.

He understood that the conditions of their withdrawal would be the subject of discussions between the Companies and the Manchukuo Authorities.

The British Government's view of the Monopoly and the responsibility of the Japanese Government had been sufficiently indicated in the note of April 29.—Reuter.

In connection with the election of Auditors, Mr. Wm. Bailey, a Member of the Company, has signified his intention of proposing the following resolution at the Meeting:—

"That Messrs. T. A. Martin & Co. be appointed Auditors of the Company for the coming year at a fee of $500.00."

Directors elected for the ensuing year were Messrs. A. Colbourne Little and L. Jack. Messrs. T. A. Martin & Co. were elected auditors.

TRADE MARK CASE

ALLEGED FALSE DESCRIPTION ON MILK TINS

The Tung Sang firm, No. 222 Des Voeux Road, West, were defendants in two summonses before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, for possession for sale or purposes of sale of tins of condensed milk to which a false trade description had been applied, calculated to deceive, and for having sold, exposed or offered for sale tins of condensed milk on which labels or wrappers bearing the words, "This is skinned milk. Children under one year of age should not be fed on it," had not been applied in English and Chinese, on May 22 and 23.

The complainant was Yeung Chuan-nam, a broker in the employ of the Holland China Trading Company, whose labels had been infringed. Mr. H. C. Lee appeared for the complainant, and Mr. H. A. do B. Botelho appeared for the defendant firm, which was represented in court by Lam Wing, assistant manager and partner.

Prosecution's Case. The case for the prosecution, as outlined by Mr. Lee, was that the defendant was charged with selling the "Strong Man" brand, with labels similar to the labels on the tins belonging to the Holland China Trading Company. The complainant had visited the Tung Sang firm on May 22, and purchased four tins of milk, which he discovered to be forged because they were smaller than the genuine tins. The complainant firm desired to bring the prosecution, because they felt it was their duty as the defendants were selling milk which was in fact not their property, and so unduly cutting their business, and secondly because the tins did not bear the labels as prescribed under the Food and Drugs Ordinance. As a result a warrant was taken out on May 23, and the Tung Sang premises were searched, and 17 tins of the same milk seized.

Evidence was then given by Yeung Chuan-nam, the complainant, who stated that the Holland China Trading Company were the only agents for the "Strong Man" brand of condensed milk, which was priced at 48 cents per case of 48 tins wholesale, and 20 cents per tin retail. His firm had not sold the genuine defendant firm, but ten cases had been sold to a man named Cheong Man between March and April. The labels on the forged tins were similar to the labels on the genuine tins, but the genuine tins were bigger. The assistant manager of the defendant firm had then informed him that he had bought the milk from a broker, but he did not hear him mention the broker's name nor did he give his address.

Defendant's Evidence. After Sergeant Guild had testified to the seizure, Lam Wing, assistant manager of the defendant firm, went into the witness box, and said that he had bought the tins from a broker named Cheong Man, who had offered to sell him good milk belonging to the Holland China Trading Company, and had quoted him prices for the milk. He had bought one case of 48 tins for $8 and a dozen small tins for $1 from Cheong Man, and was given a receipt. He thought the tins were genuine and sold by the Holland China Trading Company, and placed another order for three dozen more.

He did not do business in skimmed milk. At the time of the seizure he had given the Sergeant and the complainant all the help required, and immediately sent his fuk to look for Cheong Man, whom he later took with him to the West Point Police Station.

In reply to Mr. Lee, witness said he did not know that Cheong Man was a broker in condensed milk for any firm. He had believed Cheong Man when he stated the milk was genuine, and had not asked him whether he was the authorised agent for the Holland China Trading Company. He had not bothered to make any enquiries about the milk after that.

Cheong Man then gave evidence, depending to having sold one case of "Strong Man" brand milk, and a dozen small tins of the same brand to Lam Wing, and later another three dozen tins. The milk belonged to the Holland China Trading Company, from whom he had bought it.

The hearing of the case was then adjourned until 2.30 p.m. on June 28.

WORDS! WORDS!

HONGKONG RADIO SERVICE BUSINESS

Last year the Hongkong Radio Service, which now operates point-to-point services with eight foreign countries, sent 5,464,624 words of message traffic, a net increase over the previous year of more than 15 per cent.

The total number of messages handled by the service, was 463,148, making approximately twelve words to each radiogram handled. Unpaid traffic amounted to 1,278,922 words.

These messages included anti-piracy radiograms, of which there were 11,169 (11,128 received and 31 transmitted), police messages, meteorological messages, Rugby press news, and navigational and health messages. The busiest point-to-point service was that linking with the Chinese Government stations at Amoy, Canton, Foochow, Swatow and Shanghai. Over a million words were exchanged with these stations.

Sixty-seven licences were issued to ship stations, 44 to dealers. Nineteen amateurs were licensed during the year, while 4,201 listeners took out licences, the latter figure being a record.

Hongkong now operates direct radio communication services with British North Borneo, Dutch East Indies, French Indo-China, Formosa, the Philippines (and thence to the United States and other parts of the world), China, Macao and Siam.

MENAGERY OF MUSICOVER-SUBSIDISED
ART'S POVERTY.PARADOX IN PARIS

Paris.
Intrigued by the fact that Paris provides a city the size of Boston with half a dozen symphony orchestras, that it probably offers more first performances than any other city in the world, and that in spite of this apparent violent musical interest, it plays the music it presents with consistent badness, an investigation of this paradoxical position is being sought.

The reason seems to be too much encouragement.

France is the prototype of paternal government, and there are few human pursuits that can be described as "worthy" which are not in some way directly encouraged by the government by the simple method of handing some money to somebody. It appears that symphonic music is no exception. In this case the subsidy is handed out in proportion to the number of first performances of French works that appear on the year's programmes.

It might appear at first blush that this is a splendid thing, but as it works out it gives reason to the opinion that the good old doctrine of private initiative and laissez faire has perhaps one or two good points.

QUALITY UNIMPORTANT

The first result is that orchestras are founded and thereafter operated by persons whose interests are financial rather than musical. Quality of performance does not affect the government subsidy, amounting that orchestras in other countries are directed by businessmen rather than philanthropists, which is far from being the general rule, their own interests impel them to give reasonably good performances to hold audiences and to support the box-office. This necessity does not appear in France, and the cheaper the overhead, the higher the profit.

The government does not even get good measure for its money, for second (unsubsidized) performances of new works are almost unheard of, competition is strong for excerpts from new works which require no more than three minutes playing time, and in a whole season the new music presented, if played at one concert, would not detain its audience much longer than its accustomed period.

The sad fact that in most Paris papers the critic's appreciation of a composition is in direct proportion to the impresario's friendliness with the advertising department of his paper, if not to the amount of interest shown in an easily calculable mathematical fashion in the critic himself, does not prevent composers from wishing valiantly that just once some one critic might be able to sit through his work from beginning to its not far distant end, mangled as it might be by the low-priced musicians recruited from the neighbourhood cafes for the rendition of symphonies.

UNFORTUNATE COMPOSER

To just how great an extent government benevolence makes it easier for the young French composer to get his work played may be judged from the recent case of Hector Fraggi, by no means an unknown composer (his opera "A quoi revêt les jeunes filles" has been presented in Marseilles), who has exceptional relations with the persons who decide what music is to be played. Nevertheless this was his experience with a ballet

BANANA AND DATE SALAD

PEEL and thinly slice 6 bananas, place them in a shallow dish, and squeeze over them the juice of 1/2 a lemon. Stone 1/2 lb. good dates, cut each in four, and place with the bananas. Mix three tablespoonsful olive oil with a tablespoonful lemon juice and season with salt and pepper. Pour the dressing over the fruit and garnish with the heart and crispier leaves of a fresh lettuce.

"Conte d'Asie," based on an episode from the Arabian Nights.

Several years ago Fraggi's ballet was accepted by the Opera-Comique and announced for presentation during the season. Three directors succeeded on another, but the ballet did not appear. The directors were willing, but the complicated politics of the subsidized theatre continually got in the way. Despairing of ever hearing his music played in a house kept running by the French government's paternal interest in the art of music, Fraggi managed to get one of Paris's major orchestras, the Lamoureux, to put a minute fragment from it on its programme.

Naturally, the first performances of Pierre Bretagne's "Prise du soir dans la montagne," of "A ce qui vient" by Jeanne Depay, and of the finale (only) of a symphony of Paul Le Flem were to be heard elsewhere at the same time, but Fraggi hoped for some of the critics.

CRUEL CRITIC

Then the Gaité-Lyrique, putting on Reynaldo Hahn's operetta "Malvina," suddenly shifted the date of its first performance and made it coincide with the orchestra concerts, which took the critics away from all the first auditions.

One reviewer—Emile Vuillermor of "Excelsior"—was alone in hearing Fraggi's composition. He reported that it was miserably played, and that without explanation the last section, listed on the programme, was omitted, the orchestra having had time that very morning only to run through once the earlier part of the composition, because it devoted most of its time to the preparation of that unknown work, Beethoven's "Heroic Symphony."

That was the result of Fraggi's years of effort to get his piece before the public, and now that the subsidy has been collected for its presentation, it is unlikely that it will be played again.—United Press.

YOUNG NAZIS
TRAINEDSCHOOL RECESS
ON FARMSNO AIMLESS
PLAN

Berlin.
Summer school holidays this year will mean something more than aimless play for some 30,000 Prussian school boys and girls between 10 and 14 years of age. That number, it is estimated, will be taken to the country this summer in the second year of the Nazi "Landjahr" organisation for the agricultural training of the children.

Organised into brigades, mostly from industrial and tenement sections of the cities, the children are placed in camps of 40 to 50, or are housed in hamlets adjoining the land where they are to work and learn. Although they come from the less favoured sections of the cities, there are no weaklings among them, for they have been subjected to thorough physical tests, and have received the commendation of their teachers.

The Spartan ideal is predominant: "The Nazi state is not a charitable institution, they must be fit," one official of the Ministry of Culture said in outlining the "Landjahr" work. "Membership in the Landjahr is a certain distinction for a school child; he finds it easier to get an apprenticeship. Artisans prefer a boy who has gone through the year, and many of last year's group have already obtained good jobs." Participation in the "Landjahr" is not compulsory in applying for an apprenticeship, however, it was stated.

IDEALOGY LECTURES

The "Landjahr" is not an automatic apprenticeship to farm labour, it is explained; that is a department organised from the older Hitler Youth, and is called the "Land Hilfe Dienst" (Land Helpers' Service). The "Landjahr" really asks and expects little actual farm labour on which the peasants can depend in working their land; it is rather intended as a course in nature instruction for city children.

The boys and girls are housed in separate camps or homes, under a leader who has completed a special course of Nazi instruction. In the forenoon they are taken in groups to the land and set to small tasks such as weeding, clearing brush, or helping with the milking. Perhaps their most useful time is during harvest, when they relieve the regular workers of many small chores.

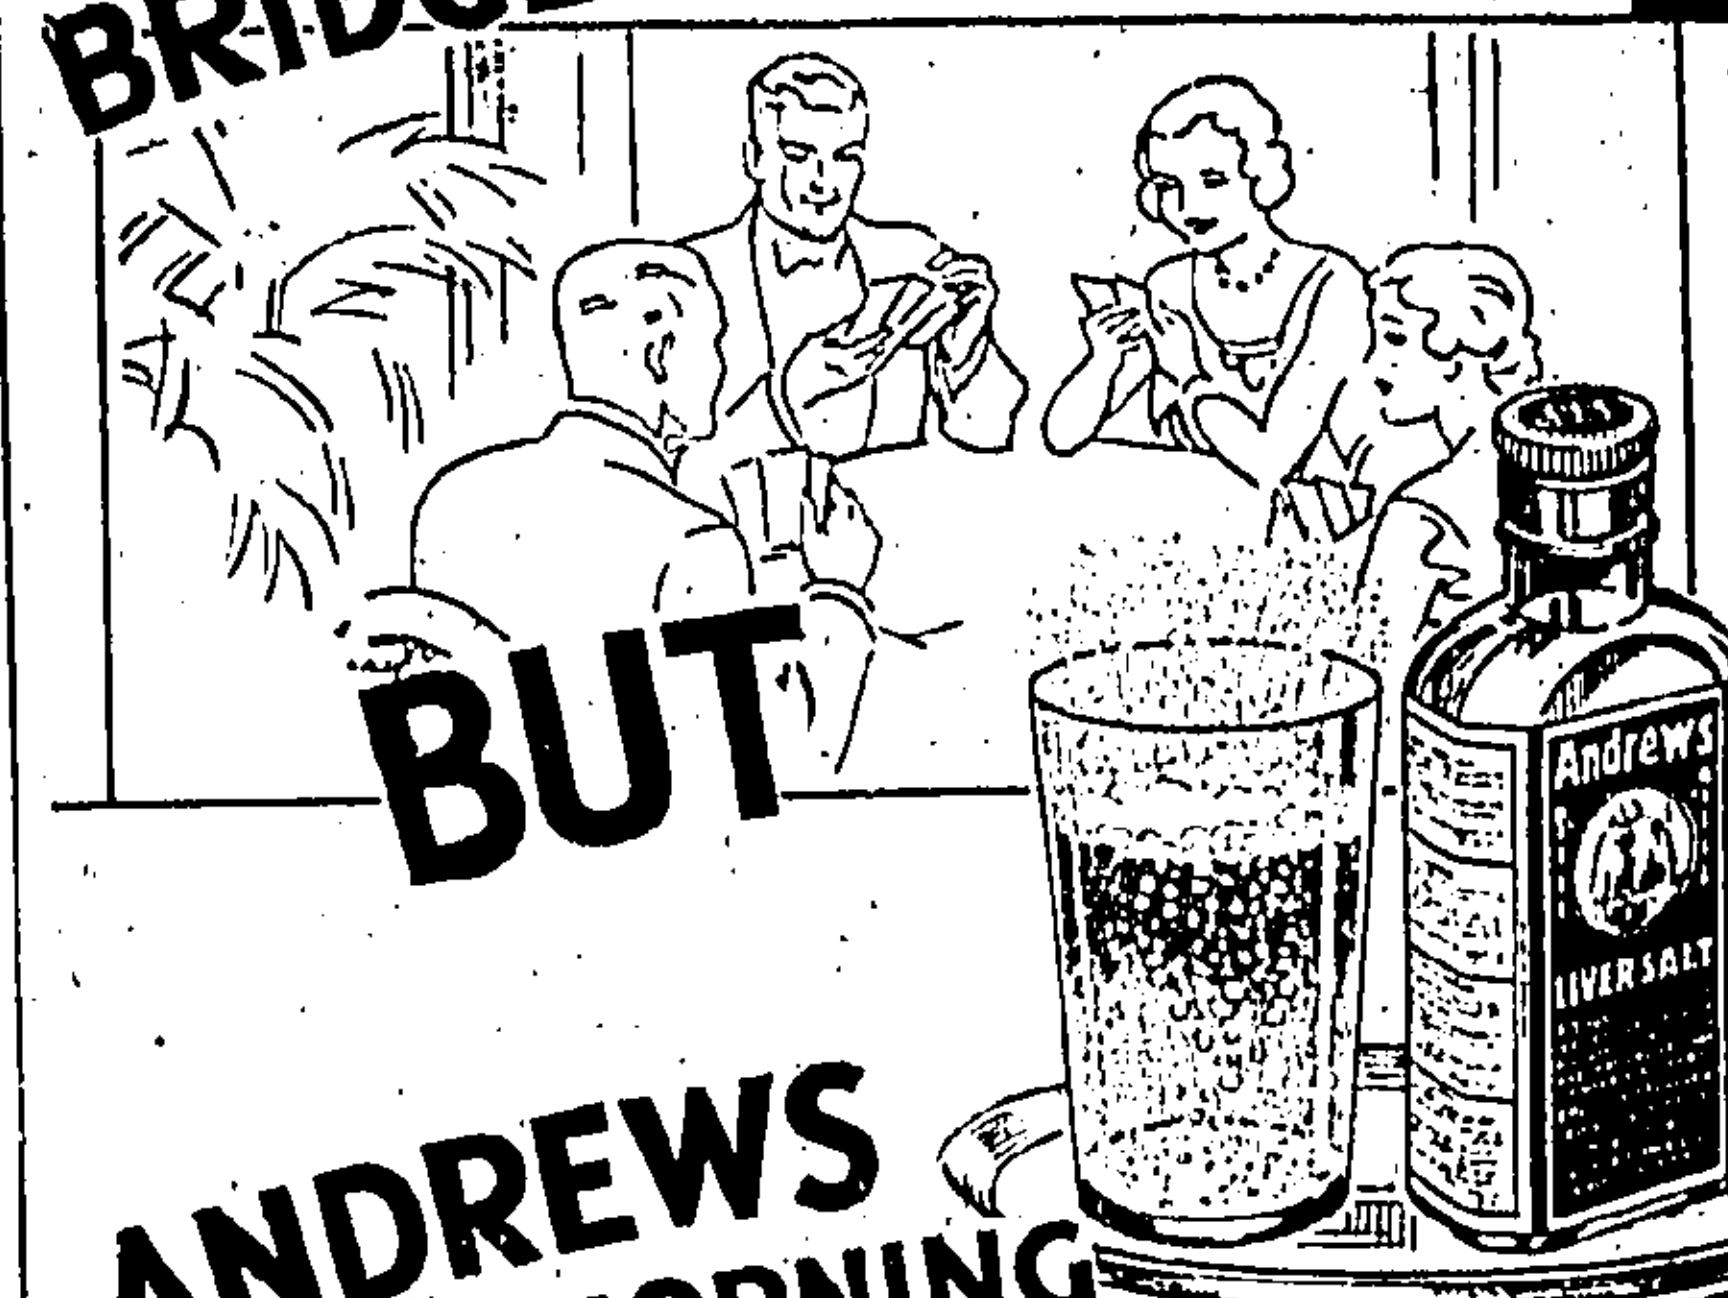

The groups return to their homes for the noon meal, and then are put to bed for a two-hour nap. In the afternoon they forget about farm work. Games and sports fill in the time until dusk, when they hike back for the evening meal and—then listen to a lecture on Nazi ideology.

COVETED TASK

Because the actual work is light and the comradeship element is strong, the "Landjahr" has become a coveted assignment among city school children. Many who completed the session last summer having completed their grade school and failed to get an apprenticeship in the city, have returned to the villages and through contacts established in the summer have got jobs with neighbouring peasants or with artisans in the hamlets. That is one of the chief aims of the "Landjahr"—to instill a love of the land in the children and induce as many as possible to go to the country, although it is emphasized that there is no coercion toward this end.

To date the "Landjahr" has been confined to Prussia only. Last year 22,000 schoolchildren, 14,000 boys and 8,000 girls participated. The estimated 31,000 for this summer from Prussia is smaller than had been hoped, due to the lack of enough trained leaders. It may be another year before the service can be extended to the rest of Germany.—United Press.

"FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY" RETURNS TO P.I.

MANUEL QUEZON'S POLICY IS "AMERICA FIRST"

Manuel L. Quezon, whom the Philippines may honour with election as first president, in a portrait just completed by Leon Gordon, noted painter.

A bronze little man with graying hair is back in native Philippine Islands to face what very likely will be a glorious climax to a life of public service.

He is Manuel L. Quezon, for years the president of the Philippine Senate and guiding spirit of his people. Unless all signs fail, he will be the first president of the Philippine commonwealth, which is established under the recently enacted Philippine Independence bill.

So potent an influence in the life of his people has he become that rival political parties are expected to bury their prejudices to pay him the signal honour of making him the unopposed candidate for the presidency in the election to be held in September 15—an accolade comparable to George

Washington's "Father of His Country" title, though Quezon has won independence for the islands through diplomacy in stead of force of arms.

PUTS AMERICAN INTERESTS FIRST

As he started on his 8,000-mile journey home from the United States he left behind an assurance of protecting American interests in the islands which, as president, he would be able to carry into effect.

"The Filipinos thrill to the knowledge that they have been raised to the estate of free men, conscious that the situation has been made possible by American appreciation of the pricelessness to all people of independence. 'There can be no doubt that as the future calls for national alignments along the lines of good will, of tariff agreements, trade advantages and the considerations which make up the warp and woof of the ties between peoples, the interest of this country will always rate first in the consideration of the Philippines."

MAN OF MANY ACTIVITIES

It was as a patriotic citizen rather than as an oracle of his country that Quezon spoke in his final interview before starting the long journey to Manila. It was early in the morning, but he was the centre of a beehive of activity. His suite presented a scene that called on every resource of the quick, eager energy Leon Gordon so vividly recorded for posterity in a recently completed portrait that Quezon is taking across the Pacific with him.

He talked while posing for a sketch. "You'll have to sit there," he pointed, "so the artist can go on working, too."

In an adjoining room, his retinue of secretaries and aides buzzed busily. From time to time one would make his appearance to put a tersely answered question to Quezon.

"I am leaving for Manila firm in the belief that the forthcoming inauguration of the Philippine commonwealth will inaugurate a new era and a new relationship between your people and mine that will surprise the great nations of the world by its accomplishment," he asserted.

SEES FUTURE AS UNCERTAIN

Regarding the political future of the islands, he would only say: "Events shape and reshape themselves with startling rapidity in the Orient these days. A year or two may produce results and reactions that no mind could to-day be expected to forecast."

As he journeys westward there echoes his heartfelt appreciation for the island's independence.

"No nation in history has ever done so magnanimous and so unselfish an act as has been performed by the United States in granting the Philippines their independence. This act was not the result of revolution or duress. It was the voluntary act of a great nation in granting to a small dependent country the right of self-determination. Time can never remove from the minds of my people—those of this or any other generation—an appreciation of this act—unprecedented in the history of nations."

W. M. Piror of the Johns Hopkins medical school announced perfection of a method by which cortin, the hormone of powerful chemical substance secreted by the outer layer or cortex of the adrenal gland, can be made to combine with charcoal. This charcoal compound can then be taken through the mouth. In the stomach, the cortin is set loose from the charcoal. It is believed that this will prove a suitable treatment for Addison's disease.

NEUROSIS AND SHEEP

Addison's disease, characterized by changes in the pigments of the skin, general muscular weakness, and derangement of the digestive process is fatal.

The possibility that cortin might constitute a treatment for neuroses and other nervous condition, was seen in experiments reported by Dr. H. S. Liddell, Dr. O. D. Anderson, Dr. E. Kotyuka, and Dr.

F. A. Hartman of Cornell University.

Sheep were made to respond to stimuli which were so much alike it was impossible for the animal clearly to distinguish between them. A condition known as "experimental neurosis" was thus established.

When the sheep were given adrenalin, the hormone secreted by the central portion of the adrenal glands, their nervous condition was accentuated. But the sheep were calmed and their nervous responses improved by injections of cortin. It was believed cortin might prove suitable treatment for certain nervous conditions in human beings.

HYPNOSIS AID

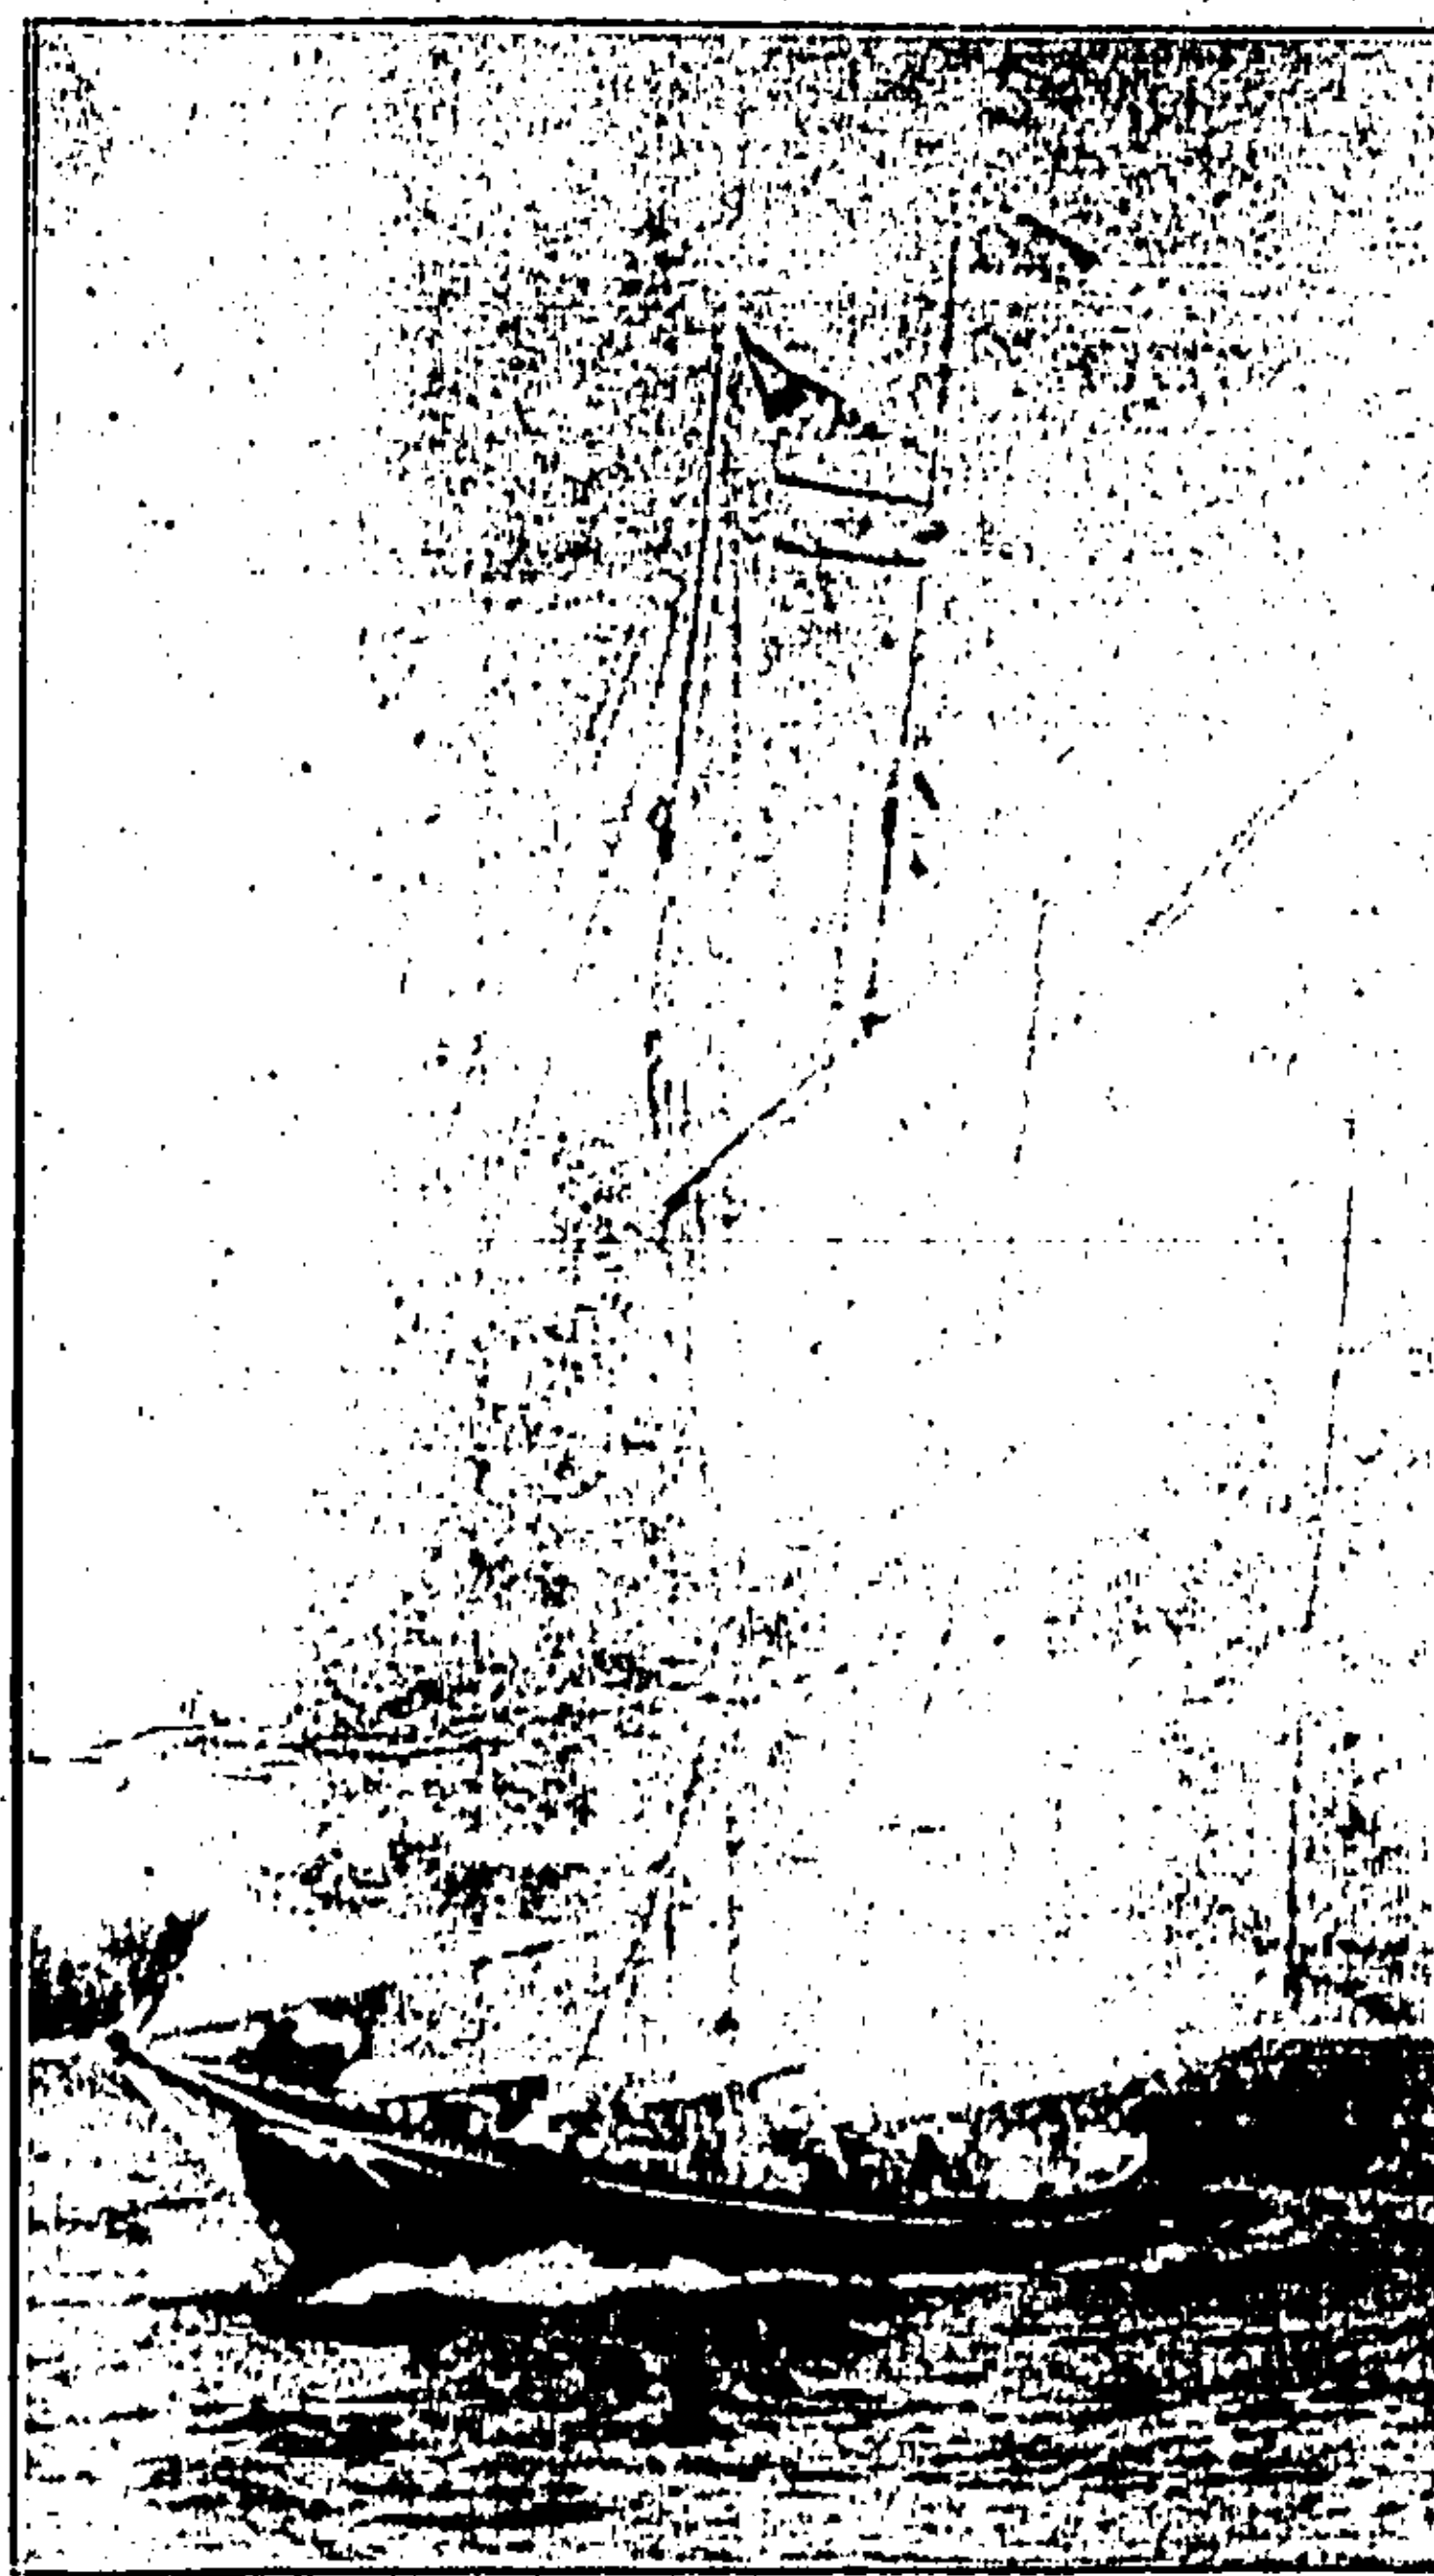

The use of a cortico-adrenal extract to increase immunity against infectious diseases was seen in experiments reported by Dr. C. A. Fox and Dr. R. W. Whitehead of the University of Colorado medical school.

Removal of the adrenal glands in animals lowers their resistance to toxins, drugs, and infectious processes, and causes deficiency in ability to build up immune bodies in the blood stream.

The Colorado experimenters found that injections of a cortico-adrenal extract would aid rats in battling infections and developing immune bodies.

Contractions of the stomach by hunger can be reduced by the aid of hypnosis, Dr. H. L. Frick, Dr. R. E. Scantlebury and Dr. T. L. Patterson of Wayne University reported. A new and simple method of preparing vitamin G in pure crystalline form from liver extract was reported by Dr. Samuel Lepkovsky, Dr. William Popper, Jr., and Dr. Herbert M. Evans of the University of California.—United Press.

With only half a crew, but with Angus Walters at the helm, Canada's most famous schooner, the Bluebonnet, queen of the Atlantic fishing fleet, sails for England and a barnstorming tour of the British Isles.

President Eamonn De Valera of the Irish Free State here is reviewing veterans of the Bloody Easter Monday uprising when civil strife created havoc in the streets of Dublin. O'Connell Street, main thoroughfare of the Free State capital, was the scene of the disturbances. Many of the veterans here are wearing the uniforms of that day.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, June 17.

The following reports on the New York Stock market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's market: Stocks today were irregular. Silver and copper issues eased, due to lower world prices and the situation regarding investment. Utility shares firmed on hopes of some modification of the Wheeler-Rayburn Utility Holding Company Bill. Bonds were upward, led by railroad issues. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregularly higher. Utility issues were strong.

S. C. & P. New York office cables: Stocks were moderately easy. Mill activity is estimated at 38.3 per cent. of capacity, compared with 39.0 per cent. the previous week.

New York and Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:

Cotton: The market is featureless, awaiting some action by Washington. Demand for "spot" cotton is poor and mill curtailment continues.

Wheat: There was some covering by short interests and rains in the South-West. Prices are possibly moderately higher on the oversold condition of the market. The visible supply of wheat shows a decrease of 2,307,000 bushels.

Corn: There is a further delay in planting and there are rains in the Central Belt, which are not wanted. The visible supply of corn has decreased by 1,000,000 bushels.

Rubber: There are threats of a minor strike in Akron. The market is very steady.

Sugar: The market is stagnant and featureless.

Relief From Insomnia Through

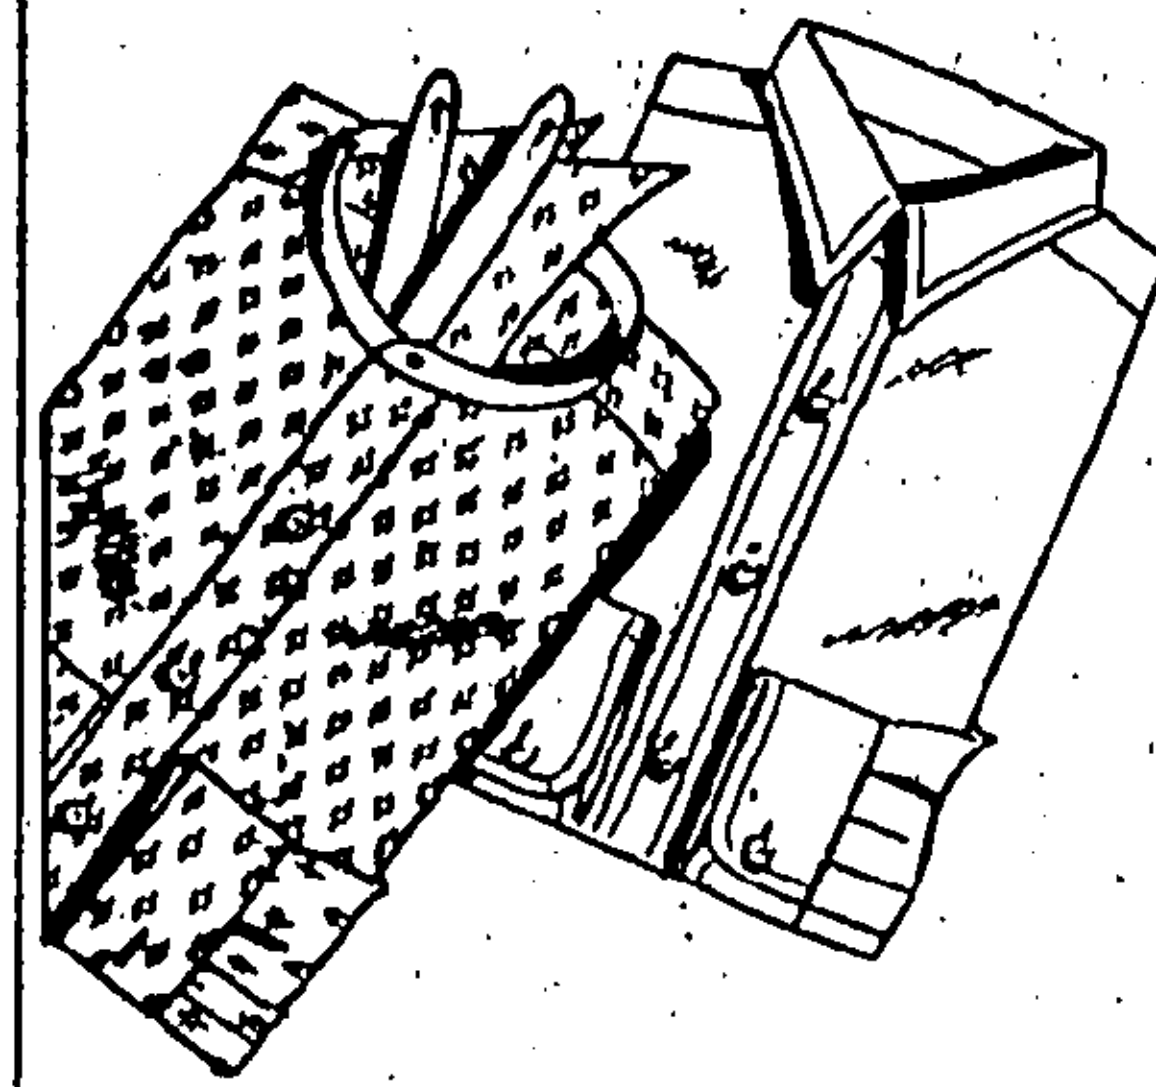

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Counting imaginary sheep as they pass through a gap in a hedge, though age old advice to sufferers from insomnia, is unfortunately not an infallible cure for this distressing complaint, which is primarily a nervous one. When the nerves are in a state of exhaustion, digestion is upset, pains in the back and limbs beset you, sleep becomes impossible.
With lack of adequate sleep your symptoms grow worse, you become depressed in body and mind, which quickly leads to a nervous breakdown with its attendant ills.At the first signs of insomnia, your most urgent need is to build up the blood since the nerves depend for their nourishment on the blood.
To create new rich, red blood in abundance there is nothing to surpass the hospital tested remedy Dr.
Williams' Pink Pills, the world renowned blood and nerve tonic which has restored health and strength to countless sufferers from nervous disorders during the past fifty years.If you are suffering from over-strain through work or worry, if you cannot sleep properly, have a poor appetite, are troubled with your digestion, are ageing prematurely, feel tired even after slight exertion,
when elusive pains assail you, do not delay, for all these are indications that your blood has become impoorished.Begin to-day a course of Dr.

THE PHILIPPINES PROBLEM

A distinct step forward in the realisation of Philippines independence is marked by the announcement of Mr. Frank Murphy, the Governor General, that September 17 has been fixed as the date on which the Commonwealth elections will be held. The plebiscite recently held showed a tremendous majority in favour of the new Constitution; it now remains for Filipino electors to vote for the first time for their own President, who will nominally control the destinies of the islands until independence becomes absolute ten years hence. Although there is general agreement that the transition period may be one of some difficulty, optimism is felt as to the future of the islands. For the next ten years, the United States will still remain responsible for protection of the Philippines. Congress recently passed a law authorising appointment of a military mission to the islands, and America will retain the right to intervene in Philippines affairs until the decade expires. The situation at the moment, and to some extent the future also, is somewhat influenced by the fears felt in some quarters that Japan may cast covetous eyes on the territory, and it is thus thought that an untoward combination of circumstances might lead the United States into an extremely difficult position, even after the task of getting out of the islands had formally begun. It is of interest, therefore, to note four suggestions which have just been put forward by Mr. Raymond Leslie Buell on behalf of the American Foreign Policy Association. He suggests that it might be better to grant independence right away, so as to avoid the difficult transition period; the signing of a reciprocity agreement between the United States and the Philippines, to save the islanders from economic collapse; the employment by the new Philippine Republic of expert advisers nominated by some such body as the League of Nations; and an international agreement among the Pacific Powers to guarantee

NOTES OF THE DAY

FLYING FOR ALL

Herr Kronfeld's flight in an engined glider from London to Paris at a cost of barely 6s. for petrol and oil brings flying for the million appreciably nearer. Low-powered aircraft are clearly destined to do for the air what the light car has done for the roads. This flight between two capitals has shown something of their potentialities. It is now possible to own a machine which costs no more than an inexpensive motor-car; and to fly it for 9s. an hour. Besides being cheap and easy to manipulate, the engined glider has a low landing speed, which is a safety factor of no small importance to the intending pilot. The day is coming when most people will fly as a natural mode of transport. Cheaper flight will be of great service in encouraging air-mindedness. The light aeroplane is being rapidly developed abroad, notably in France, where the "flying flea" is extremely popular, and Germany, America and to some extent Britain, are studying this field of progress.

TAKING THE SKY TRAILS

Dr. Harlow Shapley recently told an "Open Night" audience at Harvard Observatory that in the last thirteen years 30,000 to 40,000 persons have visited station in Cambridge, which periodically opens its doors to the public in the interest of widening popular knowledge of the cosmos. Progress in photography and the spectroscopic investigation of stellar light have greatly strengthened the ties of interest which have been built up in recent years between astronomers and laymen. The routine work of the professional astronomer is highly technical and pains-taking. The vast bulk of it is accomplished not by visual observation of the heavens but by extremely refined photographic methods. Expert interpretation of the product of telescope and camera is essential, and the advances achieved in equipment are immensely valuable in popularizing the revelations of the "sky patrol." Four motor-driven telescopic cameras record the happenings above Harvard's new Oak Ridge station in Massachusetts throughout every clear night of the year, and mechanized observation of the sky is continuous at many other points throughout the world. Astronomy to-day leaves no stone unturned to enrich its knowledge of the cosmic creation. And the observations of laymen are encouraged through organized methods of reporting the flights of meteors and the study of variable stars. Real contributions to natural science have resulted from astronomy's refusal to "high hat" the man in the street. The gain in culture which has resulted from this intimate cordiale between specialist and layman is worth noting, and the perspective realised from contact with supergalactic interests is one of unimagined splendour. The modern observatory has made it possible in a striking sense for the layman to put Emerson's advice into play and to hitch "his wagon to a star."

TO-DAY'S MOTORING HINT

FABRIC UNIVERSAL JOINTS

The car will run for thousands of miles before the need arises for renewing the fabric in the universal joints. In course of time wear becomes noticeable and it is then that a repair should be effected to what is a vital part of the transmission system. Many owner-drivers are keen to do all they can themselves, but it is not advisable for them to tackle this job. Fitting a piece of leather or ordinary fabric may appear to be all that is needed, but this is not so in practice. It is essential that specially prepared fabric be used. Special discs are made for the purpose, these being formed of a number of layers of patent fabric arranged with the threads at angles. A direct pull is provided between each pair of bolt holes. Even these special discs require careful fitting, so it is better to entrust the work to a skilled mechanic.

neutralisation of the islands. In granting the Philippines independence, the United States is attempting to do two things: do justice to the Filipino people, and rid itself of a potentially embarrassing entanglement. It may therefore be that some such programme as has been suggested might produce the results desired in a better way than is now proposed. Be that as it may, it would certainly be an ironic stroke of fate if the Philippines question should involve the United States in trouble after it had formally started to withdraw.

SIX PENNY FLIGHT TO PARIS

By ROBERT KRONFELD

Robert Kronfeld is an Austrian gliding expert, who a few days ago made a remarkable flight from Croydon to Paris in his tiny single-seater gliding plane, which is provided with a 6-h.p. motor-cycle engine, and is capable of a speed of 65 m.p.h. The flight cost him less than 6s. for fuel. Herr Kronfeld, it will be remembered, in 1931 won the £1,000 prize offered by The Daily Mail for the first gliding flight across the Channel and back. In this article he discusses the developments to be expected in aviation from the new form of flight.

MY object in undertaking the London to Paris flight was to show that flying to-day is well within the means of the average person—just as cheap and every bit as safe as the small fouring car.

Yesterday's achievement was no fantastic stunt. I was simply showing how easy it is for anyone to fly. My wife has been among my many pupils, and she has learned to fly a glider in a few lessons, and was able to take over full command of a glider with a small motor like the one I used yesterday after only one week of tuition.

The glider I brought over with me is to be delivered to a French firm, who intend to build it in series for the French public. That shows the interest in these gliders which is being taken over here in France.

I must say that in England also I am continually being asked about gliders; and I do really think that it would be of immense use to the British public, not only for sporting purposes but also for the really important objective of making as many young people as possible air-minded, if the science of gliding were to become more widely known.

For young men and young girls I cannot think of any more useful and at the same time entrancing pastime than learning to use a glider.

A start may be made with a simple glider, and then the beginner may go on to a glider with a small motor—a runabout plane, as it might be called, such as the one I used in my Paris flight.

Remember that for that flight I used under four gallons of petrol, and some 6d. worth of oil! The journey thus cost me barely 5s. 6d.—far cheaper than if I had packed the machine up and delivered it as freight.

Not long ago I had to deliver just such a glider in France, and the carriage cost me nearly £19. Think of the difference! I came over for less than 6s.

The taxicab journey from Le Bourget aerodrome to Paris cost me more!

I had a very good journey with good air conditions, but if I had had a contrary wind I should have got over just the same. With my machine I can fly extremely low, and can therefore seek an altitude where wind velocity does not hinder me.

My machine takes off in 80 yards, just like the majority of planes, but, instead of having to continue running in a straight line after rising, I can turn within the limits of my take-off field and gradually rise in a spiral, practically like an autogiro.

A field of 200 yards in length is quite sufficient for me to take to the air. I can land at 18 miles per hour, and therefore I need not fear a crash. Should I have to land on rough ground I simply sit down.

Now imagine what a wonderful sporting achievement it would be if we could have hundreds of gliding clubs in England, and tens of thousands of young men and women gliders taking off from almost any flat field or piece of common ground; able to take an evening gliding flight for 30 or 40 miles out into the country and back, or go to Scotland for a week-end from Surrey.

When I landed in Paris my petrol tank was barely half empty. I could have continued my journey for about another 230 miles, which would have taken me to near Geneva.

And to think that because I thought I needed all that petrol I almost overloaded myself and for the first time took a large parachute with me!

Both the British and the French Air Ministries, it should be pointed out, are eager to help this new movement in cheap flying, and it is thanks to both of them that I was able to obtain the necessary permits without difficulty.

There are heaps of people who want to fly but who cannot do so because of the cost. They must have a cheap machine on which they can rely.

In trying to create this cheap plane small wing loading has been made a feature, as experience has proved that machines with a light weight per square foot are extremely safe.

With the machine with which I crossed over yesterday—a B.A.C. Drone—all kinds of risky things can be done which could not be attempted with an ordinary plane. There is no danger of stalling.

A flight of 800 to 1,000 miles would be possible with this same machine equipped with a bigger tank.

I may point out that the B.A.C. Drone is fitted with a 600 c.c. Dugan engine developed out of a standard motor-cycle. It is practically the same as that of the (Continued on Next Column.)

motorcycle, but with small modifications for aviation purposes.

The glider which I have just delivered cost $275. The French glider company, however, with the subsidies which are given for such craft by the French Air Ministry, hope to be able to deliver to their clients a glider built in series at from something like $160 to $180.

That is the proper spirit. There is no doubt that we are now in the Flying Age. For the spirit and knowledge of flying to be spread everywhere among our youth we want flying gliders to be available for them as cheaply as a runabout car, and, soon, perhaps, almost as cheaply as a motor-cycle.

PLANNING ATLANTIC AIRWAY

MAMMOTH CRAFT TO SPAN OCEAN

LUXURY CRAFT

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received, June 17, 5.50 a.m.)

London, June 17. A trans-Atlantic passenger service by mammoth aeroplanes equipped with cinemas, dance floors and cocktail bars, is fore-shadowed by the announcement of the proposed formation of the British Bellanca Aircraft Corporation, with a capital of £400,000.

Mr. Howard Kronick, of the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation of America, states that plans are going ahead for a plane construction plant at Speke, near Liverpool.

Mr. Kronick added that it was hoped that the plane would be ready within five months, and that the service will start early next year.—Reuter Special.

U.S. Silver Price

FLUCTUATIONS NOT DESIRABLE

Washington, June 17. Silver industrial authorities in close touch with the situation, today expressed the opinion that there is a growing belief among the western miners that the United States Treasury should cease meddling with the silver price.

Nine important operators say that they would welcome the price of $1.29 but say that it is most undesirable to have violent fluctuations in the price of silver.

Some miners say that they would prefer an increase in the price of base metals instead of an increase in the price of silver.

This, they say, is because in most of the United States mines it is unprofitable to produce complex ores unless a fair price can be obtained for the base metals.—United Press.

The increased imports were mainly in respect of raw materials and articles mainly manufactured for British staple industries.—Reuter Special.

London, June 17. Although the visit is private, Amir Saud will be the guest of His Majesty's Government for the first two weeks of his stay, which will extend over four or five weeks, and a programme has been prepared for his entertainment during the period of official hospitality. It is expected that the Amir will be received by the King in formal audience and will attend the third Court on June 25.—British Wireless.

BRITAIN BUILDS FOR PEACE

REALISES URGENCY OF AIR PACT

BALDWIN SNAPS BACK AT LANSBURY

London, June 17. Something of Great Britain's policy and plans in connection with the protection of Europe against war and the defence of her own shores in case of aggression, was revealed when the House of Commons resumed today.

The particularly responsible and delicate business of achieving an aerial pact amongst the European powers was in the hands of Mr. Anthony Eden, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister stated when answering the somewhat critical remarks of Mr. George Lansbury, Labour leader. He had twitted the Prime Minister upon the duties of the Ministers without portfolio, of whom Mr. Eden is one, and Mr. Baldwin was curt in his reply.

The House was told something of the plans to expand the Royal Air Force and the steps which were being taken to guard against profiteering in the aircraft industry.

The House of Commons cordially welcomed the new Ministers at its reassembling after the Whitsun recess. The former Premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, appeared relaxed in the House for the first time in six years. He sat respectfully on the Treasury bench, his eyes half-closed.

Mr. George Lansbury, the Labour leader, twitted Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the new Prime Minister, upon the duties of the new Ministers without Portfolio and the duties of the new Lord President of the Council, who is Mr. MacDonald.

CAUSE OF PEACE

Mr. Baldwin replied with some asperity. Mr. Eden's appointment, he declared, would materially strengthen Great Britain's contribution to world peace. He believed it was an advantage to have ministers in a government who could concentrate upon policy without the distractions of departmental responsibilities creeping into their thoughts.

He added that of all the offices he had held he had never had more work or less pay than when he had assumed the post of Lord President of the Council.

Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal wing leader, asked what progress had been made towards a European Air Pact.

Sir Samuel Hoare replied that the Government was giving that matter its closest consideration. They fully realised its extreme urgency, he added.

Various questions both of principle and procedure were involved and inevitably required frequent interchanging of opinions between the powers concerned.

In the circumstances he thought it would be better not to enter upon a discussion of details of the situation.

NO PROFITEERING

With regard to the danger of profiteering and with respect to its prevention during the rush of work for the expansion of the Royal Air Force, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Air Minister, announced that the Ministry had established comprehensive machinery, involving consultation with the Treasury, covering the whole range of contracts involved and providing for control of prices.

The Air Ministry intended to make sure that no one reaped an excessive profit, said Sir Philip.—Reuter.

When taken to the police station defendant told the police that the baby was not hers, but this morning she claimed that it was. The baby is only about 20 days old.

Subsidy For Exports?

U. S. PLAN TO SELL WHEAT SURPLUS

Washington, June 17. The Agriculture Adjustment Administration is seriously considering subsidizing the exportation of approximately 25,000,000 bushels of America's surplus soft white wheat from the Pacific North-West.

The idea behind such action would be to take care of an anticipated small surplus.

In this connection, considerable pressure has been exerted lately to revive the North Pacific Emergency Export Association.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt has signed the bill fixing the duty free imports of Philippine cordage at 6,000,000 pounds annually.—Reuter.

The reason given for the reduction is the present financial difficulty of the Central Government.

YOUNG MAN SENTENCED TO DEATH

crossing this matter with his counsel and instructing solicitor. Do you think he fully understood what he was saying and the attitude he adopted?

Dr. Shaw: I believe so. Addressing accused, His Lordship said: I see no reason whatsoever to assume, either from my own observation this morning or from what I have heard from Dr. Ingram Shaw, who has had ample opportunity of seeing you, that you are not quite capable of understanding these proceedings and the inevitable consequence of your plea. I cannot see that any useful purpose could be served by exercising the statute of discretion in asking the Registrar to enter a plea of "Not Guilty." I am prepared to accept your plea of guilty, and it only remains for me formally to call upon you to say whether you have anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon you according to law.

Accused replied in the negative, whereupon Mr. Lim told his Lordship that he understood his client had something to say and asked leave to explain the position to him.

ACCUSED'S STATEMENT

This was granted, and, after a brief consultation with his counsel, accused made the following statement from the dock: "I have known this girl (deceased) for a little over two years and I have been living with her for over a year. During that period I took her back to the country where I properly married her. At the wedding, invitations were sent to relatives and friends in the country. We lived together peacefully until the beginning of this year when she ran away and came back to Hongkong. She found a job here as a waitress. When I found her I advised her not to carry on such a position. She refused to listen to me, although I persistently advised her not to continue her work.

"Thinking over and over again of what she had done to me and the position she had brought me into, I could find no way out. I then decided to stab her, and, having done so, I intended to commit suicide. It is so unfortunate that I failed to take my life. Under these circumstances, if your Lordship decided to remit the sentence of death to one of life imprisonment, I would thank you for doing so. But if your Lordship thinks it is impossible to do so, then I hope your Lordship will pass an early death sentence on me."

SENTENCE PASSED

His Lordship: The law requires only one punishment for that offence which you have pleaded guilty.

Immediately after he had committed the deed, accused stabbed himself apparently with the intention of committing suicide. SECOND DAY'S PLAY IN BRITISH AMATEUR GOLF

T. B. MITCHELL

BOWLING FEAT

T. B. MITCHELL TAKES ALL TEN WICKETS

SECOND DERBY BOWLER

London, June 17. T. B. Mitchell, the Derbyshire and former England bowler, has added his name to the list of cricket immortals by capturing all ten wickets in an innings in a first class match. Mitchell has just performed the feat in the County Cricket Championship whilst playing for Derbyshire against Leicestershire.

His final figures read:

O. M. R. W.

19.1 4 64 10

Mitchell, who was born in 1902, is a leg-break slow bowler and is considered one of the best of his type in the country. The latest copy of "Wisden's" speaks thus of the Derbyshire bowler, "Mitchell, taking 138 wickets for just over 17 runs apiece, beat his own record set up the previous summer and deservedly topped the averages. His exceptional success on hard wickets brought him recognition in two of the Test matches with the Australians. In these games, however, Mitchell's skill in spinning the ball and usually good command over length deserted him."

Mitchell is the second Derbyshire bowler to take all ten wickets in a match. In 1921 W. Bestwick, when playing against Glamorgan at Cardiff, bowled 19 overs, two of which were maidens and conceded 40 runs.

T. W. Wall, the Australian fast bowler, was the last to perform the feat. He captured all ten wickets for South Australia at Sydney against New South Wales in 1932-33. After having taken one wicket for 31, Wall's figures then were 5.4 overs, 2 maidens, 5 runs, 9 wickets.

AMERICAN HOLDER WINS THROUGH

Lawson Little Plays Like A Champion

By Vagrant, at St. Annes

London, May 22.

Lawson Little, U.S.A., the holder, ran into his best form here yesterday in beating Eric Martin Smith, who won the title in 1931. Much of his delicacy round the greens had returned to him, and the further the game went the longer he got. At the 14th, 450yds., he was twelve feet from the flag with a No. 5 iron. Martin Smith proved a worthy foe, and it was not until the turn that Little was able to shake him off.

Little started in typical style, putting a delicate little chip stroke dead to get a winning three. He went further ahead at the 3rd, where Martin Smith pulled his drive into a far away bunker. He recovered well, but Little ran his approach putt up a mound, topped his second from an awkward stance, but topped it far enough to get home easily with his third, only to miss a four-foot return putt.

Both missed short putts on the 4th green; Smith saved the 5th with an eight-foot putt after chipping up from the right; he holed another longish one on the next green, and then raised his hopes by winning the 7th, where Little pulled his drive against a mound, topped his second from an awkward stance, but topped it far enough to get home easily with his third, only to miss a four-foot return putt.

LITTLE OUT IN 36

Little at once got his two-hole lead again, holing from six feet after both had been over with their seconds, whilst Martin Smith failed from less. Little was out in 3, 4, 5, 3, 4, 6, 4, 3, and his opponent in two shots more. Starting for home, Little helped himself to another hole, rolling in a 12-foot putt for 3 at the 10th. Martin Smith got the better of the adventurous 11th, winning it in 5 to 6.

Both pulled their drives, Martin Smith just short of a nursery of childish saplings, Little into it. Martin Smith played a remarkable recovery to finish up high on the left, and Little's shot struck a branch and finished short in the rough. Even so, he was left with a six-foot putt to save the hole, but failed. But that was Martin Smith's last throw, for Little hit one of his very best iron shots to win the 12th in 3, and got a lucky four at the 13th, where a pulled drive hit the crowd and dropped short of the ditch for which it was found. Martin Smith had pushed his out into a bunker, but followed this with a recovery drawing well-earned applause, and then put a little chip three feet from the hole.

Then Little had an enormous drive to the 14th, put his second 12 feet from the pin, and holed the putt for 3 to become dormie. Another grand second home gave him a four that was nearly a three, and victory. His figures in were 3, 6, 3, 4, 4, 4. If he maintains yesterday's standard, his elimination is going to require some brilliant play. His metamorphosis in one night is remarkable. He has replaced the mediocrity of Monday with golf of the highest standard.

A POOR MATCH

After the alarms and excursions of Monday it would have required a lot to surprise us yesterday, and nothing of the sort was forthcoming. Chief interest of the morning was centred on the meeting of Cyril Tolley and William Tulloch, a Scottish international who has twice reached the semi-final round in this event. It proved extremely poor fare for the most part, neither player touching his accustomed form.

Tulloch started with the disconcerting experience of missing from under two feet for the half, but he squared at the next by holing a six-yarder.

Tolley won the next in six, playing a good recovery from the bottom of a ditch, but was twice bunkered on his progress to the green at the next. Tulloch was far from happy with his wooden seconds, and Tolley nailed his figures out were 4, 5, 6, 6, 3, 4, 3, 4, 3-38. Coming in, Tolley began to find length and accuracy and, with Tulloch unable to raise a pull-up, a disappointing contest ended.

E. F. Storey just got home by one hole against the Hon. Michael Scott. P. W. L. Riddon played some capital golf in beating J. S. F. Morrison by 7 and 6. His figures out were 3, 4, 5, 3, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4-34, and he started home 4, 4, 4, Francis Francis bumped into a tough one in John Burke, former Irish champion, who was out in 35 to be 3 up. Francis made a few mistakes, but every one cost him a hole.

Burke came home in 3, 2, 4, 4, 3, 4, and finished the high hopes of Francis. Such is the luck of a championship, where some folk go out in 40 to find themselves in the lead.

Leslie Garnett travelled smoothly in beating Count de Borelgrave. The match was square at the turn, which both reached in 38. Then Garnett brought his heavy artillery into action and with 4, 4, 2, 2, 4, 4, 4, brought a summary conclusion to the affair.

THOMPSON'S GOOD SHOWING.
In another fine game A. S. G. Thompson beat Harry Bentley. Thompson was out in 35 to his opponent's 36 and one up after some extremely exciting give and take. Thompson started by winning the 1st in 2, holing from six feet. Bentley then won the 4th, and lifted over a stymie to win the 5th. Thompson won three and again took the lead when he holed a putt right across the green at the 7th.

Coming in, Thompson slowly forged ahead and was never troubled. E. Gibbs fulfilled the expectations of many and went to victory quite eased by the surroundings. When he beat Captain C. G. B. Stevens by six and five he was still under fours.

TEE BALL LOWER FOR DRIVE

WHEN PLAYING IN WIND

FEAT BY JIMMY HINES

Although one of Jimmy Hines' best shots wasn't made in tournament play, it nevertheless rates as one of the best shots ever made by him.

Playing at Timber Point, L. I., in a friendly match, Hines faced the 215-yard fifteenth hole with the wind directly against him. The hole would not have been so difficult to play if it hadn't been for the wind.

Knowing that it would take a full drive to carry in the face of the breeze, Jimmy took a driver, teed off, and put the ball two feet from the pin, a remarkable shot.

Hines' secret in getting this distance on a windy day is as follows: "Tee the ball lower for the drive, and hit down on it."

South Africans Made To Follow On

WICKETS FALL FAST IN TRENT BRIDGE CRICKET TEST

London, June 17. After the heavy rain of yesterday afternoon, the wicket was drying rapidly under the influence of sunshine and wind. As might be expected under such circumstances, R. E. S. Wyatt, the English captain, decided to declare with Saturday's total of 384 for seven wickets and let the South Africans make what they could of it.

The weather was fine and sunny when the South Africans commenced their innings before a crowd of 3,000 spectators. The pace of the wicket was easy.

After Bowes, Nichols, Verity and Robins had had spells with the ball, the attack was eventually in the hands of Robins and Nichols. The latter was lifting the ball occasionally.

The South African opening batsmen, I. J. Siedle and B. Mitchell, were on the defensive until Siedle drove Robins past cover to the boundary ropes for the first boundary hit of the innings.

Scoring was exceptionally slow, Siedle taking 51 minutes to get into double figures.

Mitchell hit a couple of boundaries and was then bowled by Nichols who sent down a ball which came up very fast off the pitch. He had been batting for 65 minutes for his 25 runs.

The score-board showed 42 runs when Mitchell left. Siedle was joined by E. A. Rowan, one of the most accomplished batsmen in the touring side. The new-comer settled down quickly and hit four to the on-boundary to hoist the half century in 68 minutes.

At lunch time, Siedle and Rowan were still together. They had meanwhile taken the score to 98 for one wicket.

SIEDLE'S FINE SHOTS

Siedle was hitting some fine shots to the leg side, especially off Verity, the Yorkshire bowler. He had 47 to his credit and Rowan 20.

The crowd had swelled to 6,000 when the game was resumed after lunch. During the interval, there was a shower.

Without any addition to the score, Rowan was dismissed. He was caught behind the stumps by the wicket-keeper, Ames, who was standing up to the bowling of Robins. He was attempting a late cut when he snicked the ball into Ames' gloves.

A. D. Nourse, of whom great things were expected, turned out to be a disappointment. He stayed long enough to make only four runs. He crashed Robins to the off boundary, to send up the 100 in 152 minutes.

He then gave a "dolly" catch to Hammond, fielding second slip, off Verity shortly afterwards. The ball cocked up suddenly.

Siedle, who had been batting very patiently all the while, was the next man to return to the pavilion. With his score at 59 he was bowled by the Yorkshire left-hander. He had contributed almost half his side's score of 120 for four wickets.

He reached his 50 with a leg boundary off Verity after being at the wicket for 160 minutes. He lost his wicket through attempting to make a big hit to leg. His innings was faultless, and included in his 59 were six boundary strokes. Altogether he battled for 176 minutes.

H. B. Cameron, the South African wicket-keeper, joined his captain, who at that stage was not out with five runs. Cameron at once showed that he was in an aggressive mood. Although Wade had been at the wicket for some little time, Cameron quickly overhauled him.

CAMERON AGGRESSIVE

When the score had been taken to 116 for four wickets, Cameron had 17 while Wade could only claim ten. Three fours in an over by Cameron off Robins helped the South Africans to hoist the 150, which was reached after 220 minutes' play.

At 20, Cameron gave a difficult chance to Mitchell-times in the slips off Bowes. The ball kept low and was not accepted by the Oxford player.

Misfortune befell the South Africans when Wade mistimed a shot and was caught by Nichols in the slips off Verity.

The South African captain had contributed only 18, but he had seen the score taken from 103 to 174 for five wickets. He was at the crease for 105 minutes.

Shortly afterwards, Cameron got his 50. Ten was then taken, Cameron having exactly 50 and K. G. Viljoen four.

The score was 190 for five wickets. The old saying that interval is the best change bowler was borne out after tea.

When play resumed, Cameron could only add two runs to his score. He was bowled by Nichols.

The score-board read 198 for six. Cameron played on after being at the wickets for 115 minutes, during which time he hit eight fours, the feature of his innings being fine drives on the leg side.

Vincent was out from the second ball he received, and with the score at 26, for S. Viljoen had his off stump removed by one of Nichols' expresses. Langston was unable to score and Crisp was caught at cover by Robins. Nichols again being the lucky bowler. The innings closed for 220.

Following on Siedle was caught by Verity at short square-leg off Nichols for two runs, in the third over of the innings. Mitchell and Rowan then played out time.

SERIAL STORY—

The DARK BLOND

by CARLTON KENDRAKE

CHAPTER XLVII

Sergeant Mahoney stopped the car in front of the apartment house. "I have been thinking," he said, "about Gentry. You say that he tried a key to apartment 309 and it wouldn't work?"

"That's right."

"Then, until he got to apartment 309 he must have thought the key was going to work."

"Yes, Why?"

"In that event," he said, "he must have used the key to get into the apartment house. In other words, he must have opened the outer door with that key."

She stared at him, her forehead showing lines of bewilderment.

"In other words," Mahoney said, "someone gave Gentry a key to apartment 309. That someone had another apartment in the house and must have given Gentry the key to that apartment instead of apartment 309. Both keys would open the door of the apartment house itself. The peculiar knocks were merely a signal so the conspirators couldn't be surprised by anyone with a pass-key."

Milliecent recognized the logic of his remarks. "Good heavens, yes! And perhaps that other apartment is where—"

"Exactly," he interrupted. "Now that apartment must be on the third floor. Norman was carried from apartment 309. He would never have left it voluntarily. They would hardly have taken him up or down stairs."

Sergeant Mahoney stepped from the car, rang the bell of the apartment marked "MANAGER." At the third ring a speaking tube whistled. A woman's voice said, "If this is a tenant who's forgotten a key, I'll open the door. If it's someone who wants an apartment, come back at a decent hour."

"It's the police," Sergeant Mahoney said. "Open the door and meet us in the corridor with a pass-key."

A moment later the door buzzed open. Sergeant Mahoney pushed his way into the apartment house. Milliecent saw a big, blond woman with a white, frightened face, hugging a kimono about herself.

Sergeant Mahoney showed her his badge. "Give me a pass-key," he said.

She handed him the pass-key. Sergeant Mahoney escorted Milliecent to the elevator, slid back the door of the cage, pressed the button for the third floor.

"When you get to that floor," he said, "get out and run up and down the corridor screaming, 'Norman, where are you?' After that, no matter what happens, act naturally. That is, be frightened. Don't let on that you know the police have the place surrounded. For your information, I have men placed where they can come to your rescue whenever I give the signal, but I don't want to do that."

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Every cinema goer will certainly thrill to the screen story of carefree youth which will be seen by Thursday at the Queen's Theatre. "Bachelor of Arts" is the title of this outstanding Fox production—yes, it is adapted from the famous John Galsworthy novel of the same title and is the most honest and "decent" film of college life ever screened. Perhaps its life-giving quality is its sense of humor. That, of course, stems directly from its author, the man who wrote "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and "Galahad," and who is even more famed as a humorist than as a novelist. But the same gay and authentically lively note has been struck in direction, playing and production generally. Tom Brown and Anita Louise are seen in the two most important roles: the young campus sweetheart who meets the problems of an adult world in an adult way, and not by shouting "rah-rah-rah!" There is an exceptionally fine supporting cast. Henry B. Walthall has an important role and, as his wife, Mae Marsh contributes a beautiful performance—her first since "Birth of a Nation" 20 years ago. In "Bachelor of Arts" the campus is peopled by such engaging young people as Arline Judge, Frank Albertson, John Arledge and Frank Melton. No wonder life moves quickly at this film university. An then, to top the laughs, Stepin Fetchit appears as a slow-motion bellhop in a fraternity house.

"The Great Hotel Murder"

Screen players are much younger and better looking to-day than they were ten years ago. Many of the people whose voices are admired for their clearness and distinction to-day would have failed to pass the first test a few years ago. This is the opinion of Ernest Palmer, A.S.C., one of Fox Film's ace camera men. Mr. Palmer photographed "The Great Hotel Murder," Fox Film's new mystery comedy which comes on Wednesday to the King's Theatre.

Love is co-featured with Victor MacLaglen in the screen version of Starrett's popular Red Book mystery yarn, "Recipe for Murder." They portray two rival sleuths in this John Stone production, which Eugene Forde directed. In the supporting cast are Rosamary Ames, Mary Carlisle, Henry O'Neill, C. Henry Gordon, William Jann, Charles C. Wilson, John Wray, and others.

"Crime Doctor"

A detective photoplay hailed as a distinct departure from crime films

until I've got some incriminating evidence."

She nodded.

"Good luck," he told her, stepped from the elevator and let the door close.

As the closing door made the electrical contact, the elevator lurched upward. It jolted to a stop at the third floor. Milliecent saw a deserted corridor. She screamed, "Norman, Norman! Where are you?" and ran the length of the corridor.

Some man shouted through a closed door, "Pipe down. I want to sleep."

A door opened. A strange man stepped into the corridor.

"Are you looking for the man who was hurt in apartment 309?" he asked.

"Yes," Milliecent said, and such was her eagerness to locate Norman that for the moment she entirely forgot she was bait for a death trap.

"I found him in the corridor," the man said. "He was unconscious. I took him in here and have been waiting for him to regain consciousness so I could find out what happened. He's not badly hurt."

Milliecent ran swiftly to the door of the apartment. The man stood to one side.

Looking past him, Milliecent saw a couch. On the couch, covered by a blanket, lay Norman. His eyes were closed.

"Norman!" Milliecent screamed.

Norman shouted, "Run, Milliecent! Call the police!"

A woman's voice screamed an epithet, a gun roared.

Norman Hupp had flung himself off the couch as he called his warning. Milliecent saw that his hands were tied behind his back as he dove, head first, to the floor. A bullet ripped the davenport where his head had been. Another bullet tore through the upholstery, ripping cloth, sending up a shower of dust and exposing wire springs.

The strange man who had stood in the doorway struck at Milliecent's head with a blackjack. Somehow she did not know how she avoided that blow and sped toward Norman Hupp.

Through an open door which led to the kitchen she saw Dick Gentry, an autograph man, who had slipped into an evil leer, taking deliberate aim at Norman Hupp's struggling figure.

Milliecent screamed, lunged forward. The gun roared. She heard the impact of a bullet striking something solid as, with a scream which surprised her, she flung herself upon Dick Gentry and realized she was holding his wrist, struggling with him for the automatic.

"You little she-devil!" he exclaimed, as her teeth sank into his hand. "Take that!"

He kicked at her. The gun roared again. Something struck her in the side with numbing force. She heard a terrific roar, felt Dick Gentry grow suddenly limp.

"Sergeant Mahoney's voice, sounding deadly ominous, said, 'Make a move, and you'll get the same dose. Stick 'em up!'"

Milliecent broke free as Dick Gentry collapsed to the floor. She saw Sergeant Mahoney cutting at Norman's bonds with a cleaver knife, saw the strange man with his hands high above his head.

Milliecent ran to Norman, screaming, "Are you hurt?" He grinned at her and said, "No. Why didn't you run when I warned you? Gentry was holding a gun on me. He said he'd shoot if I didn't lie perfectly still. I know what they wanted. They wanted to get you in here. When I saw I'd have to forward to dodge the bullet, I dove forward to dodge the bullet. A woman was with him. She ran. I couldn't see her clearly."

He straightened, rubbing his wrists. Sergeant Mahoney stepped over to Dick Gentry, slowly shook his head.

"I'm sorry, boys," he said. "I had to do it. He'd have got the girl."

Milliecent looked up then and saw that grim, silent figure had fled into the room, figures who moved with swift efficiency, jerking down the hands of the man who had lured her into the apartment, snatching handcuffs around his wrists.

"What happened, Norman?" she asked.

Sergeant Mahoney sat down beside Norman Hupp. "It's important," he said, "for us to get everything you know and get it fast. Give us the bare facts and give them quickly."

"I went to 309," Norman Hupp said. "I knocked. No one answered. I started toward the elevator. This man, nodding his head toward the handcuffed prisoner, 'stepped into the hallway. He asked me if I was a friend of Phyllis Faulconer. He said she had instructed him to let her friend into the apartment. It was a trap. I fell for it and said, 'Yes.' He let me into the apartment, struck at me with a blackjack. I was stunned but managed to tackle him."

"Dick Gentry came in. We fought all over the apartment but they got me finally. They dragged me down to this place and have held me prisoner. I think this man is a hired thug. That's all I know."

"And, by God," said the handcuffed man, "that's all you'll ever find out. You've killed Gentry. You've got nothing on me. I thought the man was a burglar."

Sergeant Mahoney turned to him purposefully. "You," he said, "know who Phyllis Faulconer is. You know where her apartment is. You can either talk or we'll take you to headquarters and when we get done with you you'll be damn glad to talk."

The man snarled defiance. "Try and make me talk," he said.

"By God," Sergeant Mahoney said, grimly, "I will."

Barnum amazed contemporary New Yorkers are also present in the film, which Walter Lang directed from a story by Gene Fowler and Bea Meredyth for release through United Artists. Adolphe Menjou, Virginia Bruce, Rochelle Hudson and Janet Beecher are also prominently cast in "The Mighty Barnum."

"The Case of the Howling Dog"

In these all talking pictures, no important player in a production takes part in a scene without having something to say before the scene is over. Mary Astor, however, has the distinction of being a completely silent participant in every scene that was made for one entire week during the production of the Warner Bros. production "The Case of the Howling Dog" which is showing for the last time to-day at the Alhambra Theatre. She was on the set in every scene, a prominent figure in the foreground of all the action that went on, yet for seven days she never opened her mouth. The explanation is a simple one. Miss Astor plays the role of the central figure as the defendant in the murder trial which forms the last and most thrilling part of the play. Accused of murdering her husband, Miss Astor sits beside her Counsel, Warren William in the role of a brilliant criminal attorney, and day after day, listens to the case presented by the district attorney, the direct and cross examination of witnesses, and finally, the presentation of her own defence, by her lawyer. She never takes the stand, however, it being a major part of the defence not to allow his client to utter a word in her own behalf. The murder trial, one of the most elaborate that has been staged for a motion picture during recent years, was reproduced virtually in its entirety.

"Now and Forever"
A new starring romantic team is presented to film audiences in Paramount's "Now and Forever," coming to-day to the Star Theatre. It is Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, and the picture marks the first time that these two popular players have appeared together as leads. In addition, five-year-old Shirley Temple, who was seen in "Little Miss Marker," plays a starring role. Together, these three compose one of the most perfect combinations seen in films. The characters they play are sympathetic, human and entirely believable, and they enact a story that is sincere, with loads of heart-tugs and tears along with the smiles and laughs. Sir Guy Stanley, Charles Granville, Gilbert Emery and Henry Kolker are also in the cast. "Now and Forever" was directed by Henry Hathaway.

ARMED ROBBERS SENTENCED

KOWLOON TONG INCIDENT

Tam Lin-fong, 20, and Kong Ho, 30, were sentenced to three years and three and a half years' hard labour respectively by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, at the Criminal Sessions this morning when they pleaded guilty to a charge of having committed an armed robbery, with another not in custody, at No. 1 Cornwell Road, Kowloon Tong, on May 12.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, assistant Attorney General, appeared for the Crown.

The accused were charged with robbing three women, Chan Kit-mui, Ho Mo-yung and Tsui Yuet-wah, of a large quantity of jewellery worth $681, of which only $330 had been recovered.

When the case was first brought up at Kowloon Magistrate's Court, it was mentioned that the accused gained admittance to the house by pretending to be looking for someone, and after having done so they bound and gagged the occupants. Through a police agent, the accused were arrested in Canton on May 15, three days after the robbery.

BLUEJACKET AS COMPLAINANT

THEFT OF TROUSERS ALLEGED

A. B. Woodford, of H. M. S. Dainty, was the complainant before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning, against Ip Chun, 23, seaman, charged with the theft of a pair of blue dungarees.

Defendant denied the charge and stated that the trousers were given to him about a month ago. Detective Sergeant D. Fitches stated that on June 12, in the evening, complainant left the trousers over his locker and went to shore. On returning the following morning, Woodford found the trousers to be missing. On June 17, he saw the defendant, who was engaged in painting the ship in dock, wearing them. He identified them by a brown button which he had sewn on himself.

The Magistrate: Identification of a single brown button is not satisfactory.

Woodford stated that he could also identify the trousers by some marks of red lead.

Woodford gave evidence, after which the case was adjourned to to-morrow.

MARCEL CAFE THEFTS

TWO EMPLOYEES GAOLED

Two men, Wong Yan and Leung Pa, were sentenced to six weeks' hard labour each by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning, when they were charged with theft by servant of foodstuffs from the Marcel Cafe, No. 70 Nathan Road, yesterday.

Inspector Stimson, who appeared for the prosecution, stated that first defendant was employed at the cafe as baker and second defendant was his assistant. It was suspected that things were being stolen from the premises, and a watch was kept. Yesterday the two men were seen leaving the cafe and were searched.

In the possession of first defendant were found a jar of preserved cherries, a tin of Carnation brand milk and ten fresh eggs. In the

SHOP FOKIS TO APOLOGISE

MERCHANT CUSTOMER ASSAULTED

Appearing before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning, on remand, Ho Yik, aged 22, Lai Lok-kam, aged 32, and Choi Chik, aged 40, all shop foks of 22, Wing On Street, were bound over in the sum of $50 to be of good behaviour for one year, and ordered to make a public apology to a merchant. They were charged with larceny by a trick, of 50 cents, and assaulting Ng Kwong-hing, merchant, of 9, Tung Man Street.

Acting Sub-Inspector Tyler conducted the prosecution, while Mr. M. K. Lo appeared on behalf of complainant.

Mr. Lo applied for withdrawal of the case, in view of the position which had developed since yesterday. The manager of the firm where the defendants were all foks had been to see complainant in hospital, and had there told him that he would do all in his power with regard to restitution, apology and evidence of character. The complainant was a man of substance, though his appearance did not appear to suggest so. He was manager of six firms, and had property in Canton, Macao, and Hongkong.

The trouble arose out of a visit to the shop, when complainant was accompanied by his small son. The child expressed a liking for a certain piece of cloth, and complainant went in and enquired its price. He was told that the stuff was $1 for ten yards. He said he would purchase five yards and gave a dollar to a foki. Examining it, the foki handed it back saying it was bad, and another was given. While waiting for the change, complainant and his son went to a shop next door to examine some other material. Not wanting any there, he returned to the first shop and asked for his change. A foki replied that he had placed it on the cloth which complainant had purchased. Complainant said he had never seen the money. A heated argument then developed, in the course of which several foks struck complainant, after threatening him. Complainant was struck in the face and body, as well as kicked.

Whistles were blown, and in answer to a constable, who came on the scene, complainant pointed out the three defendants as among those who had assaulted him. They were then brought to the Station and charged.

Mr. Lo said that in his view, and he had told complainant so, the charge of larceny could not be sustained. The complainant felt very strongly regarding the assault with regard to his dignity, and desired a public apology from defendants, rather than a fine, as the apology would go much more in restraining defendants than any fine would do.

Asked by the Magistrate if they wished to associate themselves in an apology with their master, all defendants expressed willingness to do so.

In allowing the withdrawal, his Worship told defendants that what they had done would not do. It was a very bad thing for their business. If more incidents of this nature came before the Court in future, no withdrawal would be allowed.

girdle of second defendant were found five fresh eggs.

Both defendants pleaded guilty to the theft and stated that they wanted to 'take the things to a friend.'

D. Blumenthal, proprietor of the Marcel Cafe, was the complainant.

FIVE YEARS' SENTENCE

STABBING INCIDENT SEQUEL

Pleading guilty to a charge of wounding Yu Sze-mul, a concubine, with intent to do her grievous bodily harm, Wong Tai, 23-year-old unemployed, was sentenced to five years' hard labour by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Appearing for the prosecution, Mr. J. A. Fraser, assistant Attorney General, said accused had been in Hongkong for the last five years and that there was no previous conviction against him.

Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed on him, accused replied in the negative.

According to the lower Court proceedings, accused was said to have stabbed complainant just as she was walking up the stairs of her house at 225 Jaffe Road. Accused and another man were alleged to have been procured by complainant's husband to do the act as he (the husband) did not want his concubine to return to America. Originally, the husband was also charged and in fact was committed for trial last month, but the case was dropped as he turned King's evidence.

SPEEDING OFFENCE

BRITISH SEAMAN FINED

Hilary Lionel Sydney Lloyd, aged 22, of Herefordshire, England, mercantile marine seaman, living at the Sailors' and Seamen's Institute, pleaded guilty before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning to charges of driving private car 347 in Shaikwan Road yesterday without an appropriate licence and dangerous driving at Whitfield Road.

Defendant stated that he did not know it was a controlled area.

Traffic Sergeant Blackburn stated that defendant entered from Ah King's Slipway along Whitfield Road at 30 miles per hour. There were several pedestrians about. It was raining heavily at the time. The defendant had hired the car. Defendant stated he had a driving licence in England.

The Magistrate imposed fines totalling $30.

FORGED BANK NOTES

THREE YEARS FOR POSSESSION

Sentence of three years' hard labour was passed by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, at the Criminal Sessions this morning on Li Ngai-yau, aged 27, who was charged with being in possession of 40 forged $50 banknotes of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation at the Sui Wah Yuen Restaurant, 162, Queen's Road Central on May 22.

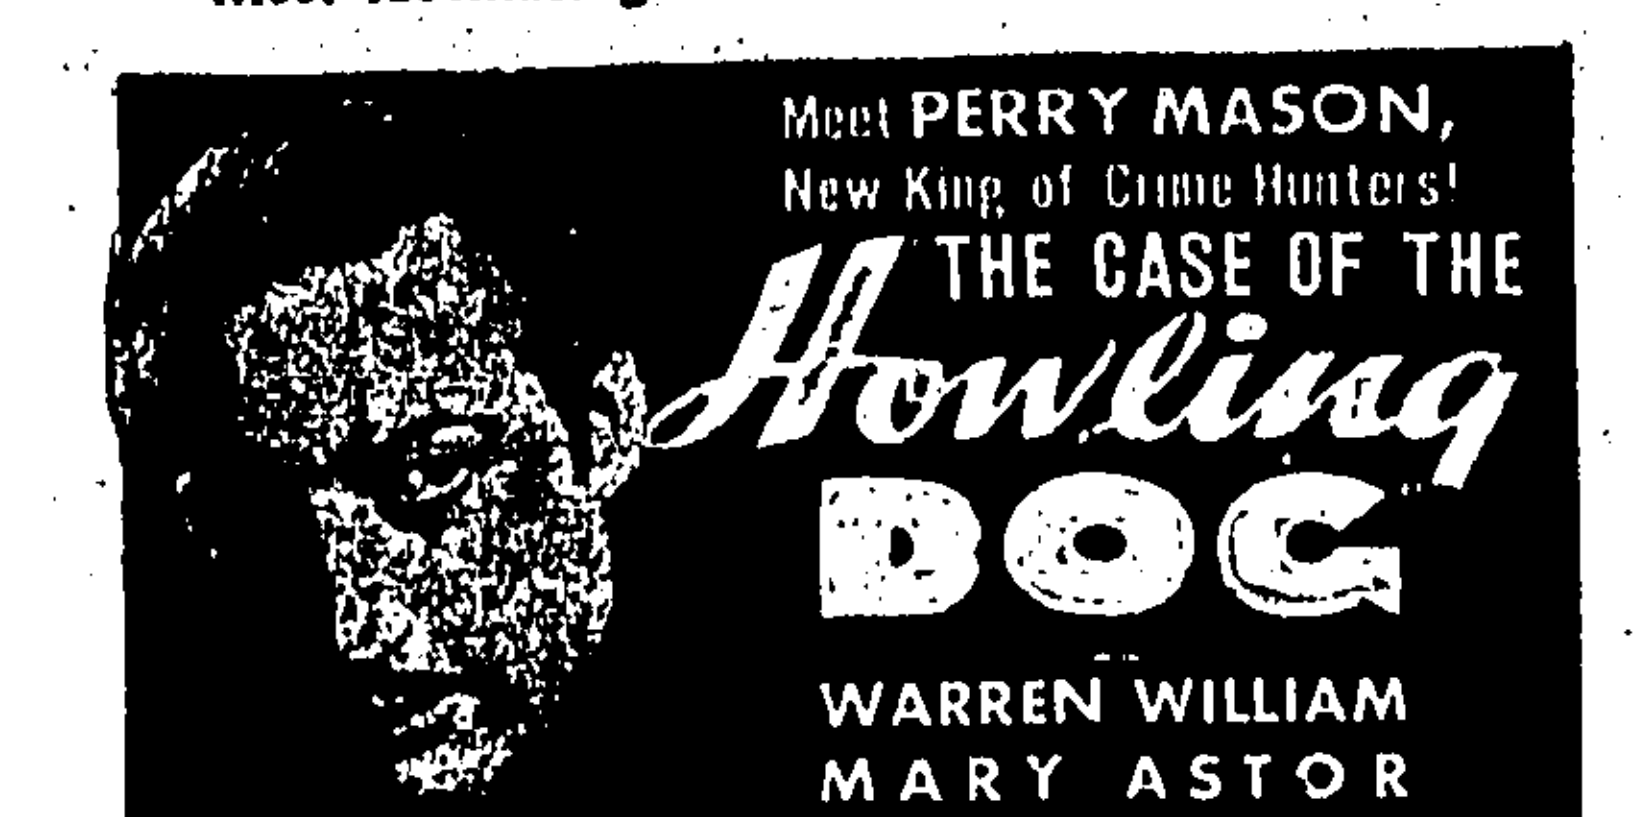

Accused pleaded guilty to the charge, and, when asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, said he was only earning a small commission in carrying the notes. If his Lordship would deal with him leniently, he would, on his coming out from gaol, endeavour to help the Government to catch the actual culprits.

His Lordship also made an order for the destruction of the banknotes.

OIL PROSPECTORS IN BRITAIN

London, June 17.
The search for oil in Britain began to-day when a number of would-be prospectors applied for licences at the Petroleum Department of the Ministry of Mines.

In the meantime the whole of Britain has been mapped out in oil areas.—Reuter.

A surprisingly large demand arose for post cards, 14,970 one cent and 7,180 four cent cards being sold.

The month preceding Christmas was the busiest for stamp clerks, the total revenue in November being $112,336. September was the slackest month, the sales falling to $85,072.
